Crop Insurance.WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—
Chances of starting a midsummer recess by nightfall faded today as members of both houses of Congress went into a huddle over a bill continuing the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation but blocking the Government's plan to reduce retail food prices by paying subsidies to processors.The formidable task of the conferees was this: To reconcile diametrically opposite proposals in the Senate version and the House-approved bill which lifted all restrictions on subsidies objected to by the administration.Climaxing a demonstration of about-facing, Senate opponents of subsidies voted last yesterday for subsidy restrictions similar to those which drew a vigorous veto from President Roosevelt only last Friday.The bill as it went to conference would continue CCC until Jan. 1, 1944, and increase its lending authority from $2,500,000,000 to $3-000,000,000, but that was virtually a side issue.Six-Month Subsidy Killed.
Gone were administration sanctions provisions which would have authorized a six-month subsidy expenditure up to $25 million dollars and clamped ceilings on existing subsidy payments to stimulate production of essential crops, import essential commodities, increase output on war minerals and compensate for war transportation losses.The bill now would invalidate the present reduction of retail prices of meats and butter through subsidies.Lawmakers disagreed generally on what final form the bill should take after the House-Senate conference committee finished with it. But most agreed on one thing: That if it retains the anti-subsidy provisions the President will veto it again.Senator Danaher (Rep.), Connecticut, contended, however, that since a veto would act to kill CCC and its important lending activities for crop production and farm transportation, the President
"surely wouldn't want to do that with Congress in recess."Bar on Subsidies Broadened.
A subsidy prohibition restricted only to CCC was offered by Dana-her but was enlarged to include all Government agencies in an amendment by Senator Tydings (Dem.)
Maryland, who appealed for defiance of a presidential veto."The administration has advocated Congress changing its mind," he told the Senate in the stockpile overwhelming votes by both houses for previous anti-subsidy legislation.

Mills—Big Mine May Shut Down.BINGHAM CANYON, Utah, July 7 (AP).—Processing of a substantial part of the nation's copper production ceased today when the Utah Copper Co.'s mills were closed because of a labor dispute.D. D. Moffatt, company president, said operations at the nearby Arthur and Magna mills had ceased because transportation of ore from the huge Bingham open cut mine to the plants ended with the walkout of 125 railroad men.At issue is the union's contention that the men are employees of a railroad company, not the copper company. Retirement and other rights are involved.The Bingham mine, reputedly the world's largest open cut mine, continued working, but spokesmen said it too would be forced to close if ore piled up.20 PCT. COFFEE RATION BONUS

A coffee bonus was authorized today for restaurants, hotels, large boarding houses and other institutional users. The Office of Price Administration said this reflected an improvement in the shipping situation which has permitted stocks of green coffee to reach the highest levels since coffee rationing started.The bonus, available when the institutional users apply for their September-October allotments, will amount to 20 per cent of the total amount obtained in the July-August allotment.The extra allowance does not apply to small boarding houses or other institutional users which obtain coffee and other rationed foods by using the ration books of persons living there.SHORTAGE OF DIAPERS, PINS, today by Representative Frances sons."What do the New Dealers expect us to do with our babies without diapers and pins with which to fasten same?" asked Mrs. Bolton (Rep.), Ohio. "We can do without a lot of things but how can a baby do without diapers?"Mrs. Bolton said the Army expected a bumper crop of at least 300,000 babies with service-connected fathers or mothers, "and this creates a major problem in strange fields still not solved by OPA."Pair With 12 Children to Adopt

Ruser when he was orphaned 45 years ago.Word of their parents' intention startled the Ruser flock today, but only momentarily. Bernard Ruser, 28 years old, younger of the two

UP TO LEGISLATURE'Court Does Not Inquire Into One's Motives for

Judge Says.By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch:
JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—An attempt by the State to break down the widespread practice of buying Federal tax-exempt securities shortly before the annual assessment of personal property for taxation, on June 1 of each year, and selling them soon thereafter, as a means of avoiding State taxation, was knocked out by the Missouri Supreme Court late yesterday.The court invalidated the action of City Assessor Arthur C. Hoehn of St. Louis and the State Board of Equalization in increasing the personal property assessment of the late William G. Yantis of St.
Louis for 1942 taxes by $378,000.
The amount represented cash temporarily invested by Yantis in Federal tax-exempt Treasury bills in May, 1941. In holding that there could be no fraud in doing what one has a legal right to do—such as the lawful purchase of Federal tax-exempt securities—the Supreme Court said in effect that the remedy for any tax avoidance rested with the Legislature in changing the assessment system, rather than the executive or judicial branches attempting to change it.Any move by the Legislature to change the assessment system, perhaps by considering the value of personal property held over a period of time rather than on the one day, June 1, is improbable this year. The 1943 Legislature now is trying to wind up its session by the end of this week or early next week.Personal property assessments for 1942 taxes were determined by the status of the property of the taxpayer on June 1, 1941.The Yantis case.
Yantis, former president of the Schnitz Hardware Co. who died on April 28, 1942, filed a return showing he owned $2611 in personal property on June 1, 1941.A subsequent investigation by Hoehn and the State Tax Commission resulted in the State Board of Equalization ordering Yantis personal property assessed at $453,440, including the $378,000 invested in Federal securities. This would have increased his personal property tax from $75.32 to $12,560.The inquiry showed Yantis on May 26, 1941, invested $378,000 of cash in Federal Treasury bills, tax-exempt, which were to mature on June 4, 1941. The bills were sold on maturity and the proceeds rede-posited in his bank account, it was said.The Board of Equalization, in ordering the increase, adopted a Tax Commission report declaring the "sole purpose" of the transaction was to avoid State taxes, and charging it was "a fraud upon the State." Executors of the Yantis estate appealed the assessment.Valid Ownership Issue.

The House refused today to accept damaged by recent floods in the Missouri Valley and other sections

the bill was up well over 20,000

spite the fact that that meant fly-not want to risk wasting height by going around the town.As he approached the port, heavy ack-ack fire burst all around him. In maneuvering, he lost val-going toward the coast.His flight was followed tensely at his base. When he was about half way home, his headquarters asked how things were going."Oh, fine," came the reply. "It's

McNair made the Channel, crossed it easily and came down smoothly on an airfield in South-so peacefully and without any noise," was his only comment.

(AP).—Jack Dempsey, former

Hannah Williams Dempsey, former musical comedy actress.Official Referee J. Addison Young of the Supreme Court, who heard the case last month, ruled that Dempsey's charge of his wife's infidelity in Los Angeles on Nov.
22, 1942, "was proven beyond doubt."Dempsey named Benny Woodall, former lightweight fighter and one-time trainer of Lew Jenkins, a fighter, as correspondent. Private detectives testified they found Mrs. Dempsey and Woodall together in a Los Angeles bungalow.Referee Young said he would consider later the question of the custody of the children and other relevant matters. The two Dempsey children, Barbara, 6 years old, and Joan, 8, are at their father's home in Scarsdale, N. Y.Referee Young dismissed Mrs.
Dempsey's counterclaim for a separation. She sought the separation from Dempsey on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment, charging he had struck her and abused her.When a final order is entered the decree will contain provision settling the interlocutory period after which the divorce will become final. This period can be three months, six months or a year.GIRAUD IN WASHINGTON

p. m., the French North African Liberation, was welcomed by high-ranking United States officers, men with whom he will confer here on the war against the Axis.

These included Admiral William

Roosevelt; Gen. George C. Mar-

Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, com-

An American naval task force bomarded the Japanese base on Kiska island last night, the Navy announced today, in an attack apparently co-ordinated with the United States offensive against Japanese defenses in the South Pacific.A Navy communiqué reporting the action in the North Pacific also disclosed that the American cruiser lost in battle with Japanese forces in Kula Gulf on the morning of July 6 was the 9700-ton light cruiser Helena.The Helena was under command of Capt. Charles Purcell Cecil of Louisville, Ky. Neither the fate of the skipper nor the safety of individual crew members was reported."The next of kin of the casualties aboard the Helena will be notified as soon as possible," the Navy said.The cruiser, which had been damaged at Pearl Harbor and was restored to service during the first 12 months of war in the Pacific, was the only announced American loss in the battle, in which six Japanese ships were "probably sunk," and several others damaged.MacArthur's Version.
A communiqué from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters last night had numbered the damaged ships as four, but today's Navy communiqué said only that there were "several."Using the MacArthur figure, Japanese naval ship casualties of all types, including sunk or damaged, now total 315 and the enemy has suffered an additional loss of 338 non-combatant ships.
The comparable American figure for combatant ships, including the Helena, is 103 vessels overdue and presumed lost, destroyed to prevent capture or sunk. Complete figures on American ships damaged are not available.Unofficial sources here indicated that while the battle of Kula Gulf has gone in favor of the American forces, the decisive naval action of the South Pacific offensive apparently is still to be fought. This conclusion is based on the strength of forces involved—relatively light destroyer-cruiser groups, with neither side having thrown heavier units such as battleships and carriers into the battle.Enemy Guns Silent.
The brief report of the attack on Kiska said only that the enemy was bombarded there and that his shore batteries "did not return the fire."Kiska has been under aerial bombardment whenever weather permitted recently but a check of previous communiques showed no record of a surface attack later than last Aug. 7.At that time warships shelled

WITNESS ASSAULTS DIES GROUP FOR JAPANESE INQUIRY

Committee Achieved Publicity on Half-Truths, Falsehoods.

FEARS PREJUDICE WILL BE INFLAMED

Asserts Someone Might
Captured Americans.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—Dillon S. Myer, director of the War Relocation Authority, charged yesterday that the Dies Committee's investigation of Japanese relocation centers has stirred up a public hatred of Japanese that may lead to "further maltreatment" of American prisoners and internees in Japan.

The investigation, Myer told the committee, has achieved "maximum publicity of sensational statements based on half-truths, exaggerations and falsehoods."

He expressed fear that "misinformation floating around the country" is inflaming prejudice against Japanese citizens and that somebody might "kill a Japanese," furnishing the enemy an excuse for retaliation against American prisoners.

Wants Army to Run Camps. Representative Thomas (Rep.), New Jersey, said today he would introduce a bill to remove administration of the war relocation centers from the War Relocation Authority to the Army.

Addressing Myer, Thomas declared: "It is just a silly social experiment you are conducting."

Myer replied: "That is a matter for the chief executive and Congress. I see nothing to be gained by arguing with you. I am going to carry out the program from the standpoint of the interests of the United States of America."

"Leaning Over Backward." Myer told the Dies group the WRA is "leaning over backward" to protect the internal security of the country in its release of Japanese evacuees from relocation centers.

He said that Robert E. Stripling, chief of staff of the Dies committee, who was sitting five feet away, had issued a statement containing absolutely no basis of fact regarding the allegedly dangerous character of Japanese who have been released.

Myer objected particularly, he said, to release of the testimony of Harold H. Townsend, former Chief of Transportation and Supply at the Poston, Ariz., relocation center, who testified before the committee in May.

36 Falsehoods Charged. Townsend's testimony contained "36 known falsehoods," Myer said, adding that Townsend "deserted his post of duty during a sit-down strike last November; he fled from Poston in a Government car in a fit of terror."

Representative Costello (Dem.), California, said other testimony proved that Townsend's testimony was generally valid. He said Townsend did not "desert," but got permission to take his wife out of the center.

J. B. Matthews, research director for the Dies committee, then read testimony of another Poston official substantiating this, and Myer said, "I stand corrected." But he insisted the testimony contained 36 falsehoods, and presented for the record a detailed list of the alleged instances.

SOLOMONS DRIVE ACCOMPLISHING MAIN PURPOSES

By B. J. McQUAD
The Chicago Daily News-Post, Dispatch Special, July 4, 1943.
ADVANCE HEADQUARTERS, AMBIBIOUS FORCE, Guadalcanal, July 4 (Delayed).—An overall picture of the situation here after the first four days of the current American offensive in the Solomons, is given today by advance headquarters.

At Rendova, main point of our attack, ground forces have taken slight punishment from enemy air bombardment and have withstood night shelling by Japanese warships, but they are accomplishing their main purpose as scheduled.

That purpose is twofold, first to subject Munda's airfield area to devastating fire from guns based in quantity on Rendova; secondly to send a strong progression of assault troops across Rovina lagoon in a frontal attack intended to capture the airfield quickly.

In Viru, on New Georgia Island, the Marines have things thoroughly in hand.

Enemy resistance at the projected Viru beachhead was so much stronger than expected that the landing had to be delayed. The Marines, advancing overland through dense jungle, were twice intercepted and attacked by Japanese forces. Just west of the village they fought a pitched battle with a considerable enemy force, which they thrust back across Viru River.

U. S. Destroyer Sunk in Kula Gulf

The United States destroyer STRONG, torpedoed and sunk Sunday night when engaged in bombarding Japanese bases on Kula Gulf in the Solomons. It normally carried 250 men, but no estimate of loss of life was given.

Developments in the Central Solomons campaign are summarized in boxes on map. In the sea engagement in Kula Gulf, United States forces probably sank six Japanese warships and damaged four others. One American cruiser—the Helena—was lost.

In the harbor, simultaneously with the start of the invasion of the Southeastern Solomon Islands, including Guadalcanal.

Today's communique made clear that American planes were pounding out a steady rain of destruction over Japan's South Pacific bases as part of the general offensive which began a week ago today.

It reported Flying Fortresses bombed the Balakoro harbor area on the west coast of New Georgia Island July 4 while on July 6 Liberators set fires in raids on Kahili and Buka Island, in the Northern Solomons.

Helena 4 Years Old. The Helena, named for the city of Helena, Mont., was commissioned Sept. 18, 1939. It was equipped to carry four aircraft and its armament included 15 six-inch guns and eight five-inch anti-aircraft guns.

Capt. Cecil, who assumed command of the Helena in November, was the Navy Cross for heroism as leader of a destroyer group assigned to a task force during the battle of the Santa Cruz Islands last October. He maneuvered his ships into a defensive screen around an American carrier and his brilliant tactics and performance of duty were credited with inflicting heavy losses on the enemy and protecting American vessels.

U. S. REINFORCES UNITS ON RENDOVA

By C. YATES McDANIEL
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, July 7 (AP).—The probable sinking of six Japanese warships and the damaging of four others by United States naval forces at a cost of one cruiser was announced today, one week after the outbreak of the current Pacific offensive.

The success scored against an enemy cruiser-destroyer force by guns of American ships which flashed in darkness of July 5-6 in the Kula Gulf above New Georgia Island, was outlined in a communique from headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Although bearing out an earlier announcement from the Navy in Washington that heavy damage apparently had been inflicted on the enemy, today's communique left many details to be filled in, including how many of the Japanese ships hit were cruisers and how many destroyers. One definitely was a destroyer, blasted by 500-pound bombs of American planes after it had been beached by damage suffered in the naval engagement.

U. S. Holds Initiative. Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific headquarters, which has immediate direction of the Solomons operations, announced today that the Kula Gulf action had ended and that the United States forces continue to hold the initiative on land and in the air, as well as on the sea. Mopping up of Japanese resistance by ground troops was said to be still in progress on Rendova Island and Southern New Georgia.

"The Japs have taken another damned good licking," Secretary of the Navy Knox told cheering shipyard workers at Bremerton, Wash., yesterday.

Troops Reinforced. The communique also disclosed that American forces on Rendova Island, seized at the outset of the new drive in the Central Solomons June 30, now have been reinforced and that efforts of the Japanese air force to checkmate the offensive by fresh raids on Australia, New Guinea and American holdings in the Solomons have been broken up.

battered by shells of United States warships in a bombardment from the Kula Gulf the night before the naval battle. The United States destroyer Strong was lost during that action, as announced yesterday.

Below it, the reinforced American garrison on Rendova has been shelling it from five miles away. And on New Georgia, American forces at Viru Harbor are in a position to move overland, having consolidated positions there.

Communique on Battle. "Preliminary dispatches report that our naval surface units intercepted an enemy force of cruisers and destroyers in the Kula Gulf during the night of the warship engagements," said today's communique.

"Details are not yet available and a final assessment cannot be made, but it is indicated that six enemy ships probably were sunk and four damaged.

"We lost one cruiser. "One damaged enemy destroyer, beached near Sambara Harbor, was attacked by our medium dive bombers which scored seven direct hits with 500 pound bombs, resulting in violent explosions and fires."

7 Planes Shot Down. In air battles over the Solomons, seven more Japanese planes were reported down, bringing enemy losses there alone to 164. Eighteen raiders inflicted some damage yesterday to positions on Rendova, but three were destroyed by ground defenses. The other four were bagged by planes over Kula Gulf as they attempted to break up the bombing of the beached destroyer.

Twenty-seven enemy bombers with an escort of 21 Zeros tried a daylight raid on Darwin, Australia, causing slight damage. Spitfires manned by Australian and British pilots downed five bombers and two Zeros. Seven Spitfires were lost, but three pilots were saved and three others were seen to bail out.

Fifteen Japanese planes raided the Nassau Bay area, 12 miles down the coast from Salamaua, New Guinea, where Americans landed June 30, but the enemy planes failed to inflict either damage or casualties, the communique said.

In still another Japanese aerial effort, nine bombers and four fighters went after the Bena Bena area 90 miles northwest of the Salamaua front, where the Allies perhaps possess landing fields known to have been built there before the war. The raid was characterized as ineffective.

A Japanese broadcast today said Japanese naval forces sank "one enemy cruiser" and set another afire Sunday night in Kula Gulf, and that torpedo boats the following morning sank three war vessels.

The communique made no mention of Japanese losses. The Japanese also said their naval planes shot down 10 airplanes Monday over Kula Gulf.

Big Japanese Submarine Reported Sunk by Bomber. WELLINGTON, New Zealand, July 6 (Delayed) (AP).—Prime Minister Peter Fraser announced today that a Hudson bomber manned by a New Zealand crew operating from Guadalcanal in the Solomons had sunk a large Japanese submarine.

There is reason to believe that an air attack on another enemy submarine also was successful, Fraser said.

Montana Plan Drive to Replace Helena. Cost, $30,000,000. HELENA, Mont., July 7 (AP).—A. T. Hibbard, state chairman of the War Savings Committee said today he would propose to the committee next week that funds be raised to build another cruiser Helena.

Navy sources in Washington estimate the cost of replacing the Helena at $30,000,000.

NELSON DENIES WPB USES QUOTAS TO CENSOR PAPERS

'Supply Is Diminishing,
But What Is Printed on That Paper Is Not in Our Province.'

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board today denied his agency exercises any censorship of magazines and books by withholding paper allotments, asserting such charges by Representative Mass (Rep.), Minnesota, were based on misinformation.

"Nothing resembling censorship is practiced, directly or indirectly, by the WPB," Nelson said. "The existing system of paper conservation orders has been devised purposely to avoid any possibility of censorship."

"We are faced with a diminishing supply of paper—what is printed on that paper is not within our province."

"Publishers . . . have a quota equal to approximately 90 per cent of the paper they have been using in the past. Under the published orders of the WPB they can print anything they choose on that paper."

Mass said today he would seek legislation to restrict WPB in its handling of newspaper quotas.

He told the House yesterday that WPB, which has ordered a new reduction in newspaper for the present quarter ranging up to 5 per cent for the larger newspapers, was:

- 1.—Using control of production "for censorship."
- 2.—Favoring some publishers over others.
- 3.—Operating with no rules, or standards, and "in star chamber proceedings," issuing "secret orders from which there is no appeal."

Mass said he was preparing a bill that would require the WPB to make all its decisions public, in the case of each newspaper or magazine publication requesting additional white paper, how much time was required handling the case and why the delay, if any.

He said he had a personal experience with WPB's handling of white paper allotments. He told the House an officer who served in the South Pacific signed a contract to write a book about the Pacific. The publisher was told by a WPB official "that he could have no paper for any such purpose."

Mass later told reporters he was the officer. He was on active duty as a Marine Lieutenant Colonel for a time in this war.

Mass told the House of a magazine which wanted to publish an article on "the lack of unity of command and failure to have adequate air support" in the Pacific, and said the publishers were advised "that the article was loaded upon with great disfavor and that pressure from above would undoubtedly result in WPB's denying them sufficient paper to continue if the issue appeared on the stands with this article."

He did not say who issued the warning, but said that after the publishers deleted the article they were given a paper allotment.

TAFT SAYS NEW DEAL SEEKS TO CONTROL PRESS, RADIO

Calls on Congress to Redefine FCC Powers
Over Networks and Assaults Antitrust Suit Against Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—Declaring the Administration has a "general passion for Government control" that threatens the freedom of press and radio, Senator Taft (Rep.), Ohio, urged today that Congress redefine the authority of the Federal Communications Commission. He said "those who brought" the Government suit charging the Associated Press with monopoly "show a reckless disregard for freedom of the press."

In a speech in the Senate, Taft demanded that the FCC suspend exercise of the augmented powers he said apparently were given it by a recent Supreme Court decision, until Congress could reassess the whole problem of radio authority.

At the same time, Taft said incidents had occurred which indicated to him that there is a "reckless disregard" for the freedom of the press on the part of some administration officials.

"Passion for Control." "The present administration has shown no concern for freedom of the press at home," Taft declared. "The suit brought against the Associated Press under the Sherman Act shows the attitude of the administration that the press and distribution of news shall be subjected to the same kind of rules as the manufacturer or the chain store."

"Regardless of the legalities of the case, it is clear that the policy which directed the bringing of this suit is part of the general passion for Government control, and those who brought it show a reckless disregard for freedom of the press. Those who drafted the Sherman Act surely had no thought that it could ever be used for such a purpose."

Taft said it was his opinion that attempts to abridge the freedom of the press thus far had been frustrated by "the ingrained insistence of our people that they prevented any great progress toward actual suppression of the freedom of newspapers and magazines."

"There is as yet," he added, "no Federal agency in control of the press, and there is as yet no Federal bureau which licenses the press. But what is true of the newspapers is no longer true of the radio—the blood brothers of the newspaper as an instrument of free speech."

Taft said the Supreme Court decision upholding FCC's right to issue certain regulations affecting advertising in connection with chain broadcasting "goes far beyond any intent of Congress which can be read into the Federal Communications Act by the average layman having some knowledge of its history."

For Limited Regulation. Regulation should be "limited to the essential rules necessary to prevent confusion in the air, decent expression and the affording of facilities to all points of view," he asserted, adding:

"If Congress feels that rules to prevent monopoly in the network field should be added, they should be made by Congress and not by a subordinate agency of the Government. And by no means should such regulations be allowed to open the door of Government control of radio, as the act of 1934 is now interpreted by the Supreme Court.

"We are governed by an Administration, which, however much it may be interested in abstract freedom in Europe and Asia, certainly does not seem interested in individual freedom in the United States."

"There is no freedom if means of communications are owned and operated by the Government. Freedom of speech does not mean that only those in control of the Government shall have the right to speak. The people must have the right and the means to speak to each other. The opposition to those in power must have the same right and means of speaking as the directors of government."

Attacks Network Rules. Speaking of the new radio network rules, Taft said, "The advertiser can only afford to underwrite such a huge enterprise—opera available to perhaps 200 million people—because he knows that a large number of those people will hear his name and have some sense of gratitude to him for that service."

"But the regulations which have been upheld prevent any network from guaranteeing to an advertiser any of its affiliated stations. In fact, they destroy the whole system of 'affiliated stations.' A majority of a five-man board has decided that the present network system is entirely wrong, and, without consultation with Congress, has undertaken a compulsory restriction which may well destroy these systems."

MUCH OF BRITISH 8TH ARMY IN MIDDLE EAST, AXIS SAYS

BERN, July 7 (AP).—A Sofia dispatch quoting the Giornale d'Italia said yesterday a great part of the British Eighth Army now was concentrated in Iraq, Iran and Syria, and said that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, its head, was reported to be in Bagdad.

LONDON, July 7 (AP).—The Germans were reported by the Algiers radio today to have sent fresh troops to the Dodecanese Islands, potential Allied stepping stones to any invasion of the Balkans.

The British radio said martial law had been proclaimed in Greece after strikes and demonstrations that threatened "to lead to a general uprising."

A German broadcast said Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had concentrated 1,000,000 tons of shipping of all kinds in North African ports, preparing for a leap across the Mediterranean.

MARAUDER PLANE PROVES ITSELF IN COMBAT IN AFRICA

Large Separate Unit of B-26 Bombers Set Up Under Doolittle Command.

By JOSEPH MORTON
AN ADVANCED BOMBER BASE IN NORTH AFRICA, July 7 (AP).—A large unit made up exclusively of B-26 Martin Marauder bombers has been created within Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's Strategic Air Force after a long trial by combat in the North African theater.

The unit, believed to be one of the largest forces of Marauders battering Axis targets anywhere, has given this medium bomber a position of equal rank with its fellow worker, the B-25 Mitchell, used in the raid on Tokyo.

In one 33-day action-filled period since the fall of Tunisia, the unit made about 50 trips over enemy territory. During four days of operations against Pantelleria alone it dumped nearly 600 tons of bombs.

Forty-six enemy fighters which challenged the Marauders were shot down. A number of grounded enemy planes were destroyed and many more were damaged.

Flyers said that figures such as these won respect for the plane, which has over-sized engines and short, stubby wings.

They said the plane has fulfilled a demand for a low altitude bomber of medium range, able to carry sizable bomb loads and fly at high speed to protect itself. Improvements have been made on the newer models as the result of experience in combat, particularly in the South Pacific.

BRITISH VOID FRENCH PAPER'S PERMIT FOR 'HOSTILITY TO U.S.'

LONDON, July 7 (AP).—The Ministry of Supply revoked today the paper license of the French weekly newspaper La Marseillaise, a British source said, because it had "for some time past pursued a policy of hostility to the United States."

The license to publish the paper had been issued originally after representations from Gen. Charles de Gaulle's headquarters that no newspaper was authorized to speak in the name of the Fighting French committee.

Fighting French headquarters said yesterday the Ministry of Information had suspended the weekly, but it gave no reason.

ILLEGAL LIQUOR SALE DESCRIBED IN WALLACH HEARING

State Agent Testifies He Had Minors Buy Drinks at Several Places in County.

LASHLY REPLIES FOR PROSECUTOR

Asserts Youths Chosen to Get Evidence Were Large — Might Have Passed for Men

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—The use of two minor youths, by agents of the State Liquor Control Department, to make cases of illegal sale of liquor against St. Louis County establishments, was brought out today in testimony, at the hearing of the State's quo warranto suit to remove Prosecuting Attorney Stanley Wallach from office on charges of dereliction of duty.

Charles A. Reed, district supervisor for the Liquor Control Department, testified to the violations, and to the fact that reports of the cases were sent to the Prosecuting Attorney's office. Cross-examination by Jacob M. Lashly, chief counsel for Wallach, brought out the fact that the two minors to whom sales were made were taken to the places by Reed and another agent, and that they had been brought from St. Genevieve County for this purpose.

Lashly endeavored to show that they were large boys, who might easily be mistaken for men of legal age. It was shown that Tom Howard, 18 years old, was 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighed 160 pounds, and that Dick Stoll, 17, was about the same height, weighing 140.

Testifies About Sales.

Reed testified that he and another agent saw beer and a highball served to the two youths at Town Hall, on Clayton road in Richmond Heights, Feb. 14, 1942; and that they saw other "apparent minors" buying and consuming drinks. Reed said the two youths went with him to the Kirkwood Drug Co. store the same day, and that a clerk sold Howard a half pint bottle of whisky.

"The district superintendent had notified me of complaints as to these places," Reed said, "and I brought these two boys from St. Genevieve. I picked them because they looked young."

Reed testified also to illegal sale of liquor at Mrs. L. Hartmann's place, Creve Coeur Lake, whisky sold though the license was only for 3.2 per cent beer; and Frank Stahl's, Gravois road near Kirkwood, a similar violation.

John S. Phillips, Assistant Attorney-General in charge of the State's case, said 26 violations in all would be shown, with the report on each case sent to the Prosecutor. Lashly argued against admitting, in testimony, any circumstances not included in the official reports, but this restriction was not imposed.

Phillips said it would be shown that Wallach had failed to proceed in the cases, on the information furnished to him. Other representatives of the State in the case are Assistant Attorneys General Vane Thurio and William Blair.

The hearing, in the Supreme Court building, is before Special Commissioner Roscoe P. Conkling of St. Joseph. After the State's case ends, probably tomorrow, the hearing will adjourn until next Wednesday, when it will be resumed at Clayton.

Lashly Statement.

Lashly's opening statement was to the effect that Wallach had done a good job of law enforcement, and had done all that a county prosecutor could do in the county liquor situation of "a metropolitan area operating under rural laws."

Lashly described the urban character of St. Louis County, and the "imaginary" boundary between urban areas, where the law permits sale of liquor by the drink, and rural areas where such sale is not permitted. A natural result, he said, was "chagrin, disappointment and revolt" on the part of the tavern keeper in the forbidden area, who sees his competitor perhaps just across the street, permitted to make sales legally.

Lashly told of the instituting of a grand jury investigation by Circuit Judge Peter T. Barrett last September. He said the judge, whose name he did not mention, took charge of the grand jury, which later recommended a move for removal of the prosecutor. Attorney General Roy McKittick was called in by the judge, Lashly said, to do things which the judge thought more important than what the Prosecuting Attorney was doing.

9 SHIPS SUNK, NAZIS CLAIM

Ex-St. Louisan Killed in Action, Two Other Men Reported Missing

Staff Sgt. Paul Meyers Who Lost Life Was Gunner and Radio Operator on Flying Fortress.

A former St. Louisan has been killed in action, two men from this vicinity are reported missing and three others have been wounded, relatives here have been notified.

Staff Sgt. Paul Meyers, 32 years old, son of Albert Meyers, 5831 Washington boulevard, was killed June 25, the War Department informed the family. Sgt. Meyers, who was born in St. Louis, but was taken to Chicago by his parents when a baby, was an aerial gunner and assistant radio operator on a Flying Fortress. He had been stationed in England. Memorial services will be held Sunday in Chicago. Surviving also is a brother, Edward Meyers of the Washington boulevard address.

Pvt. Edward J. Kasperksi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallery Kasperksi, 4735A Ashland avenue, has written his parents that he was wounded in the hand while assisting in the capture of a German soldier and several Italian soldiers in North Africa. He received the Purple Heart Medal for his wound and bravery. Kasperksi, whose father is financial secretary of the Polish National Alliance, was inducted almost two years ago.

Sgt. Robert E. Spitzfaden, an aerial gunner, has been missing since June 25, the War Department informed his father, Lieut.

Edward A. Spitzfaden of the Fire Department, 5617 South Broadway. He is 23 years old and enlisted in January, 1942.

Staff Sgt. Harold L. Schrader, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo F. Schrader, of Black Jack, near Florissant, was also listed as missing in action. He is 21 years old, and worked for the Keesbey & Mathison Co. in Prospect Hill before he went into the Army July 30, 1942.

Sgt. Meyer K. Yablonsky, 34, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Yablonsky, 4611 Newberry terrace, was wounded in action May 30 in the Aleutian area. In two letters here recently he did not disclose the nature of his wounds but said he was "getting along fine." Before entering the Army in December, 1940, he lived in San Francisco. He has a sister, Mrs. Julius B. Cytron, 3428 Louisiana avenue, and a brother, Simon Yablonsky, 6047 Barmer avenue.

Lieut. Courtney G. Pitkin, 23, husband of Mrs. Margaret Mary Miller Pitkin, of University City, has been wounded in action and is now reported to be convalescing in an Army hospital at Cairo, Egypt. Pitkin, a bombardier in the Air Force, formerly resided at White Hall, Mich. His wife lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Miller, at 7221 Northmoor drive.

The agreement was reached at a conference with Superintendent Clinton F. Smith of Max C. Starkloff Hospital, who assured the drivers he would seek a substantial increase for them, after passage of the pending measure, by presenting their case to Personnel Director R. Elliot Seacore and Director of Public Welfare Henry S. Caulfield. He explained that the drivers, now getting $133 a month and asking for $175, could receive as much as $160 under provisions of the bill, immediately on passage.

The drivers agreed also to continue handling inhalators. Smith said an extra driver to help in that work would be sent out on each inhalator call.

Patrolman James Sullivan detected the leak and went through the building rousing the tenants. He called the fire department to shut off the refrigerating unit. An hour later the tenants returned to their apartments.

OUTCOME OF G.O.P. RACE HELD REBUFF TO LICHTENSTEIN

Walter C. Harris, Backed by Lobbyist, Beaten for City Party Treasurer by Alfred Grattendick.

Defeat of Walter C. Harris by Alfred L. Grattendick for the strategic post of treasurer of the Republican City Committee last night is interpreted by politicians "in the know" as a setback for the political ambitions of David B. Lichtenstein, head of the small-lobby at the Legislature.

Denials that Harris was backed by Lichtenstein had been made by both, but a politician in a position to know what goes on behind the scenes told a Post-Dispatch reporter that Harris' candidacy was seen by many observers as a first step by the vice-president of the Public Loan Corporation group to invade "the citadel of power" and become "the man to see" in Missouri Republican politics.

This observer said that maneuvers before last night's election indicated to him that Lichtenstein, long a background figure in lobbying at Jefferson City, now was aiming for control of the city organization to reach out, for a position of commanding influence.

Importance of Position.

"Lichtenstein is smart," he said, "and he never overlooks the little things. It's true that checks for disbursement of funds of the city committee must be countersigned by the committee chairman. But suppose there's an election coming along in which spending in certain wards might affect results for an important public office. The treasurer would be in a position to hold up a disbursement until it was too late to help a candidate whose opponent was supported by a group that helped the treasurer get his job."

Lichtenstein, in a conversation with a Post-Dispatch reporter, had discounted importance of the treasurer's job, adding that in any event he was not interested in candidacy of Harris, or anyone else, and had "done nothing about it."

29 to 15 for Grattendick.

The vote, in secret balloting, was 29 for Grattendick, a lawyer and member of the committee from the Twenty-seventh Ward, and 15 for Harris, an accountant, representing the Twelfth Ward on the committee. It was made unanimous for Grattendick on motion of Harris.

The election was to fill the vacancy created by resignation last week of Rudolph A. Goerts, who had resigned as committeeman from the Fourteenth Ward last spring to run for alderman.

At last night's meeting, it was learned, Chairman Fred W. Evers was asked whether anyone had talked to him about Harris' candidacy. He said that a man, whom he did not name, had talked to him several months ago and that later Harris had discussed duties of the office with him. He made it clear that his telephone call to Harris, informing him of Goerts' resignation, was not at his initiative but in response to a request made by Harris during the earlier conversation.

AFL COUNCIL ORGANIZED TO NEGOTIATE ON CITY PAY

Officers of 28 local unions affiliated with the AFL Central Trades and Labor Union and representing 3400 persons in the employ of the city, met today at Carpenters' Hall, 1411 North Grand boulevard, to set up a permanent council to negotiate with the city on wages and working conditions fixed by the Civil Service Commission.

John I. Rollings, executive secretary of Central Trades, was named temporary chairman of the council. He said a meeting had been arranged for tomorrow with Mayor William Dee Becker and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to discuss opinions formulated at today's conference.

Formation of the council was proposed last night at a meeting of Central Trades at Carpenters' Hall. Joseph P. Clark, president of Central Trades, said the wage scales proposed by the commission were unsatisfactory.

SUPREME COURT REVERSES ROWE CASE FEE ORDER

Holds City Does Not Have to Pay Attorneys for Judge in Post-Dispatch Contempt Suit

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—An order by Circuit Judge Edward M. Ruddy directing the City of St. Louis to pay a joint legal fee of $12,000 to William R. Gentry and John L. Gilmore, as counsel for the late Circuit Judge Thomas J. Rowe in unsuccessful contempt of court proceedings against the Post-Dispatch and two staff members in 1941, was reversed yesterday by the Missouri Supreme Court.

While conceding that the Circuit Court had inherent power to appoint counsel to represent it in the contempt proceedings, Division No. 2 of the Supreme Court held the lower court did not have power to allow an attorney fee to be paid from the City Treasury.

The $12,000 fee to Gentry and Gilmore was allowed last November in a mandamus proceeding against Mayor William Dee Becker, the St. Louis Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Board of Aldermen. The city appealed.

Supreme Court Commissioner Paul W. Barrett, who wrote the opinion, said "there may be no question" that Gentry and Gilmore "justly deserve to be compensated for their valuable services, but they are officers of the court appointing them, and if the court's dignity and authority has been assaulted they were bound to accept the appointment, the honor and the challenge of defending the court, and that without pay, especially if there are no State officials charged with the duty or willing to undertake it."

He pointed out there was no statute authorizing either the appointment of counsel or the allowance of fees in such a case.

"The court could and did adequately protect itself," Commissioner Barrett said, "by exercising its inherent power of punishing for contempt and appointing counsel, and it was not necessary for the court to further exercise its inherent powers by allowing the fee in question."

All of the judges of Division No. 2 concurred in the opinion. Contempt judgments against the Post-Dispatch and two staff members, Ralph Coghlan, editor of the editorial page, and Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, cartoonist, were reversed by the Missouri Supreme court, which upheld the right of a newspaper to criticize the official conduct of a Judge in a closed case. The contempt judgments resulted from criticism of dismissal of extortion charges against John F. Nick, former car of the movie operator's union, and former State Representative Edward M. (Putty Nose) Brady.

Airlines, Army, Navy Fly Global Routes

Create 175,000-Mile System
to Battle Areas

WASHINGTON—Declaring that "the country is fortunate in having had such a high development of airline planes and operations at the beginning of the war," the Office of War Information last month reported that through the cooperation of the Army, Navy, commercial airlines and aircraft manufacturers, America has assembled the greatest air transport fleet in the world and is operating it over a 175,000 mile global system.

Shortly after the OWI report was issued, General Harold L. George, head of the Command, revealed that the system had come to the rescue of the British at El Alamein during Rommel's drive on Alexandria. The British were out of anti-tank ammunition. The nearest supply was five or six weeks away by water. The Air Transport Command sprang into action. Within 72 hours airplanes loaded with ammunition had flown the Atlantic, crossed Africa and had delivered their critical cargoes in Cairo to save the day.

The Army Air Transport Command is flying more than 90,000 miles of transport routes which are being extended as fighting fronts expand, while the Naval Air Transport Service is operating more than 50,000 route miles. In addition, the 35,000 miles of civil air routes within the United States provide ready-made routes for military use, the OWI report states.

The Army Air Transport Command flies six principal routes which cover practically every point in the Allied world. In addition it ferries airplanes from factories direct to tactical air force units, and also carries on a specialized training program for transport personnel.

The Naval Air Transport Service conducts parallel operations except for the ferrying service. Its activities radiate from three main divisional headquarters; Atlantic, West Coast and Pacific.

Airway and navigation facilities have been developed to an extraordinary degree. Six super-radio stations blanket the world, each capable of communicating with aircraft at any point on the globe. Along these sky lanes thousands of converted bombers and airliners are saving precious days in getting critical materials, officers and men to the fighting fronts. For example, the route to Australia which requires three weeks by surface transportation has been spanned regularly in less than two days.

Returning, the airplanes are loaded with vitally necessary strategic materials without which war plants could hardly continue—tungsten and block mica from the Far East, platinum from the Persian Gulf, beryl ore, quartz crystals, and industrial diamonds from South Africa, crude rubber from Brazil. Within the Western Hemisphere, the Army Air Transport Command alone is flying more than one million pounds of freight a week.

Among the two-engine converted passenger liners now in use are the familiar Douglas DC-3, the Boeing 247, the swift Lockheed Lodestar and the new giant Curtiss Commando. Converted four-engine land planes, formerly passenger carriers, include the Boeing Stratoliner and the huge Douglas DC-4. Flying boats are represented by

Aircraft Carrier Takes Fight to Enemy at Pearl Harbor, Gilbert and Marshall, Wake, Marcus, Midway, Solomons, Santa Cruz—Sinks Three Jap Carriers, Downs 140 Planes—Still Afloat, Still Fighting

WASHINGTON—The terrific striking power of the modern aircraft carrier as an offensive weapon was revealed in the combat record of the U.S.S. Enterprise made public by the Navy last month. In the forefront of almost every naval action in the Pacific this gallant ship and her brood of fighting planes—Douglas Dauntless dive bombers, Douglas Devastator torpedo bombers and Grumman Wildcat fighters—have accounted for three enemy carriers, aided in the sinking of another, and sunk or damaged a long list of Jap naval vessels ranging from patrol boats to battleships. She has blasted 140 enemy planes from the skies, destroyed

2,000 Thunderbolts Strike

LONDON—More than 2,000 sorties were made into occupied Europe by Republic P-47 Thunderbolt fighters during May, it was announced recently by Major General Ira C. Eaker, commanding the U. S. Army 8th Air Force. These fighters, latest to go into combat, comprised over half of all aircraft sent into action by the Eighth Air Force during the month. In action the Thunderbolt, with its 2,000-horsepower Pratt & Whitney engine, proved its ascendancy over the Focke-Wulf 190, chief menace to Allied heavy bombers, according to the report.

the Sikorsky S-42, and S-43, Boeing 314, and Martin 130. Among the converted bombers are the Consolidated Liberator Express land plane, the Consolidated Catalina and Coronado flying boats and the Martin Mariner patrol bomber. The engines of all the planes in these services are the radial air-cooled type, the report stated.

Commenting on the OWI report, officers of United Aircraft Corporation pointed out that Pratt & Whitney engines and Hamilton Standard propellers are used on the great majority of the airplanes operating over these global routes.

Nash-Kelvinator Teams up with United Aircraft to Build Sikorsky Helicopters for U. S. Army

Two types of Sikorsky helicopters in flight—the original VS 300 and one of a fleet of YR4A's, now being built for the Army by the Sikorsky Aircraft division of United Aircraft Corporation. A later type, the YR6, will be built under license by Nash-Kelvinator

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—The Sikorsky helicopter, first successful direct lift aircraft in the United States and already in production for the U. S. Army here at the Sikorsky Aircraft division of United Aircraft Corporation, will also be built by Nash-Kelvinator Corporation under contracts recently placed by the Army and under license arrangements with United Aircraft. The numbers to be built have not been announced but it is understood that the Nash-Kelvinator contract heralds the first large-scale production of helicopters in the world.

This makes the third product of United Aircraft to be built under license by Nash-Kelvinator. The concern is already in quantity production on 2,000-horsepower Pratt & Whitney Double Wasp engines and Hamilton Standard Hydromatic propellers.

"We are particularly pleased to have Nash-Kelvinator teamed up with the Sikorsky Aircraft division in producing helicopters," said Eugene E. Wilson, president of United Aircraft Corporation. "Such a task involves the highest degree of engineering skill and the closest cooperation on difficult technical problems and manufacturing techniques. Nash-Kelvinator is already doing an outstanding job of collaboration in producing our engines and propellers and we are confident that this new association will accelerate progress in the helicopter field."

"Here again the United States will have weapons for war in shorter time because of the cooperation of the aviation and automotive industries—further proof of the statement of a great industrialist that 'American manufacturers can cooperate in a crisis as vigorously as they can compete in ordinary times'."

Builds Propellers For Two World Wars

THOMAS A. DICKS

At his work as an engineering consultant of Hamilton Standard Propellers, Mr. Dicks recalls how as assistant foreman of tool design with Westinghouse in Pittsburgh he was first interested in aircraft propellers by Frank W. Caldwell, then in charge of propeller development at the Army's McCook Field at Dayton, Ohio, and now Director of Research of United Aircraft Corporation.

From that day to this, over 26 years, Mr. Dicks has taken an active part in the growth of the propeller industry as it harnesses the mighty horsepower of modern aircraft engines with constantly increasing efficiency.

200 Girls Go to College as Engineering Aides

EAST HARTFORD, CONN.—In a move to meet the critical and growing need for aircraft engineers, the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft division of United Aircraft Corporation has established 200 fellowships for young women in nine selected colleges and universities.

The course of study includes mathematics, physics, chemistry, engineering, drawing, mechanics, metallurgy and industrial engineering. Each fellowship covers tuition, books, fees, room, board, laundry and a cash allowance to cover incidental expenses. The term of study runs 48 weeks. Institutions participating in the program include the University of New Hampshire, Brown, Michigan State, Ohio State, Syracuse, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Carolina State.

The first group of students are already in their fourth month of study. Other groups are being formed. On completion of their course, these young women will make a real contribution to the war effort as engineering aides at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft.

Inverted Gull Wing Piques Curiosity

Vought Head Tells How Navy's Corsair Fighter Got Its Shape

STRATFORD, CONN.—Seeing more and more Vought Corsairs in the skies, aircraft spotters along the east coast have been asking the reason for the inverted gull wing design which helps make this Navy fighter so easy to recognize.

Rex B. Beisel, general manager of United Aircraft's Chance Vought division, creators of this fastest shipboard fighter, explains the "why" of the inverted gull wing in this way. The Corsair is built around the 2,000-horsepower Pratt & Whitney engine, 50 per cent more powerful than any hitherto available. To harness such power in a fighter meant employing a propeller with a diameter of more than 13 feet. To enable a propeller of such dimensions to swing clear of the deck would, by orthodox design procedure, call for a long heavy landing gear difficult to retract into the wing. Engineers went to work on the problem and came up with the inverted gull wing, with a short, light gear that fits into the apex of the V angle, saving weight and providing ample clearance for the propeller. At the Corsair lines resemble an inverted gull same time they solved another problem. The inverted gull design allows the wing to stem from the fuselage at a perfect right angle, aerodynamically the most efficient position. The inverted gull design has other important advantages. It provides improved vision laterally for the pilot, because of the low wing points. When wings are folded, it also results in a lower overall height of the airplane when stored in the carrier under-deck hangars.

In May, according to the WPA, U. S. factories built more than 7,000 airplanes. This is at the rate of more than 84,000 per year.

Aircraft-Auto Team Hits Stride Building Pratt & Whitney Engines

Ford, Buick, Chevrolet, Nash-Kelvinator, Continental and Jacobs Add Thousands Monthly to United's Own Production

EAST HARTFORD, CONN.—Teamwork between the automotive industry and Pratt & Whitney Aircraft division of United Aircraft Corporation is proving one of the great American weapons which Axis leaders overlooked in preparing their plans for world conquest.

A tour through the engine plants of Ford, Buick, Chevrolet, Nash-Kelvinator, Continental Motors and Jacobs Aircraft Engine reveals that the aircraft-auto team is hitting its stride in a manner which promises anything but aid or comfort to the enemy.

From those factories are being shipped every day more and more of the radial air-cooled Wasp type engines to add to the huge numbers from the main plant of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft at East Hartford. This is the third phase of Pratt & Whitney's program to meet the staggering war-time needs for its Wasp engines.

Pratt & Whitney actually began preparing for the present emergency when it was founded in 1925. From the beginning it developed sources of supply for engine parts under a sub-contracting system which provided the maximum possible flexibility. Over the years, the sub-contractors became regular suppliers, ready to expand in time of emergency.

When European war clouds began to gather, Pratt & Whitney went to its regular sub-contractors, determined how much more they could supply and what help they would require. At its own expense Pratt & Whitney trained new sub-contractors.

The second phase came when Great Britain and France were hurriedly strengthening their air forces. They turned to Pratt & Whitney for engines. Pratt & Whitney plants were expanded. The orders placed at that time by foreign governments provided the first opportunity to get into quantity production. It was a dress rehearsal for the big show still to come.

The third phase developed when the fall of France in June, 1940, brought into being a vast American aircraft program. The need for engines became greater than any one manufacturer could possibly handle. Pratt & Whitney, therefore, suggested that the automobile industry be enlisted to help meet the demand by building engines under license at no profit to Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. In the meantime, it and the other established engine builders would hold the line.

As a result of this step, Ford and Nash-Kelvinator today are building the mighty 2,000-hp. Double Wasp, Buick and Chevrolet are building the 1,200-hp. Twin Wasp, Continental the 600-hp. Wasp and Jacobs the 450-hp. Wasp Junior. To make possible greater speed in production, each licensee company is concentrating upon a single type.

The American aircraft program has been upped time and again since then. Now Pratt & Whitney itself has gone into a fourth phase to step up its own vast production even more. This is taking two forms.

A great engine arsenal is being rushed to completion at Kansas City, Mo., which will concentrate upon the Double Wasp. It is to be operated at neither profit nor loss by the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Corporation of Missouri, a new subsidiary of United Aircraft Corporation.

Pratt & Whitney has also enlarged the capacity of the main plant by development of a system of satellite plants in neighboring communities. They supply engine parts to be assembled at East Hartford. This satellite system provides a great expansion in facilities, without concentrating operations unduly at one spot and further complicating the housing and transportation problems.

How's Your Air I. Q. ?

Q. What are America's fastest military airplanes?

A. The Navy's Vought Corsair shipboard fighter and the Army's Republic Thunderbolt, North American Mustang and Lockheed Lightning fighters. All have top speeds of over 400 m.p.h. in level flight.

Q. What is the slowest heavier-than-aircraft?

A. The Sikorsky helicopter can fly at zero miles per hour.

Q. What is the latest trans-Atlantic speed record?

A. Six hours, twelve minutes, according to an announcement of May 5. The 2,200-mile landfall-to-landfall flight was made by a Twin Wasp-powered Consolidated Liberator.

Q. What is the greatest number of enemy fighters reported shot down by a bomber on one mission?

A. On May 21, during a raid on Wilhelmshaven and Emden, the crew of one Boeing Flying Fortress definitely destroyed 11 Nazi fighters. In addition they reported several "probables."

Q. What is the centrifugal load on each blade of a Hamilton Standard propeller turning at its normal r.p.m. on a Liberator bomber?

A. About 153,000 pounds, or the weight of a standard Pullman car.

Six companies now build Pratt & Whitney radial air-cooled engines under license were expanded. The orders placed at that time by foreign governments provided the first opportunity to get into quantity production. It was a dress rehearsal for the big show still to come.

This satellite system provides a great expansion in facilities, without concentrating operations unduly at one spot and further complicating the housing and transportation problems.

The wholehearted cooperation which has marked relations between the automotive group and Pratt & Whitney makes their teamwork one of the industrial epics of the war. While Pratt & Whitney itself was delivering all types of its engines in ever growing numbers and was working at top speed to engineer changes dictated by battle experience, it was also helping bring the auto companies into production. It supplied its designs and the know how gained over a long period of years.

The rigid system of mass production to which the auto companies were accustomed was not applicable to aircraft engine production. The licensee companies therefore adopted the flexible methods of quantity production as developed by Pratt & Whitney. As volume has grown, a new technique for quantity production of complicated aircraft engine building is evolving with all companies contributing their ideas and experience.

So perfectly have the designs been followed that parts built by Pratt & Whitney and its licensees can be assembled to make a perfectly functioning engine. Inasmuch as something over half of all higher-powered aircraft engines built in the United States will bear the Pratt & Whitney emblem, this interchangeability of parts becomes a vital necessity for maintenance the world over.

NEW TAX FORMULA AIMS AT INCOMES SWELLED BY WAR

Excess Profits Levy — House Group to Begin
Study Sept. 8.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—Congressional and Treasury experts collaborated today in drafting a new tax formula whereby persons whose incomes have increased because of the war will pay a larger share of the war's costs.

Such a plan, if written into law, would apply to individual income the principle of excess profits taxes as now applied against corporate income.

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday ordered the experts to study and report on the feasibility of such a tax, and at the same time announced it would begin consideration Sept. 8 "on a non-partisan basis" of a new general tax measure with new and higher levies.

Treasury experts and the Committee's tax staff were asked to suggest "alternative means of raising additional revenue," including information on a sales tax, the so-called spending tax, compulsory savings and increased individual and corporate income taxes.

The committee, in its last tax meeting before Congress takes a summer recess, also agreed finally that there would be no retroactive levies in the new general tax measure, saying "the main feature of the new tax bill will not become effective before January 1, 1944."

One Ways and Means member privately expressed doubt that the excess-profits principle ever could be employed against individuals because so many persons working in wartime have no previous income history and also because of the difficulty of determining just how much of a person's higher earnings could be attributed directly to the war.

Under the excess-profits scheme a person who earned say, $2400 before the war and now receives $4800, would pay more taxes than another person whose income before the war was $4800 and still is.

WARD REGISTERING MEASURE KILLED BY SENATE GROUP

Bill Was Opposed by City Election Board as Opening Way for Vote Padding.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, July 7. — The Nicolay bill, which would have required the St. Louis Election Board to arrange every two years for supplemental registration of voters at three places in each of the city's 28 wards, was killed yesterday by the Senate Committee on Elections.
Introduced by Representative Elmer Nicolay (Rep.), the bill had passed the House. It was opposed by the League of Women Voters and by all members of the Election Board, who appeared at a recent public hearing.
Jesse W. Barrett, chairman of the board, told the Senate committee the bill would open the way for padding of the registration rolls because it would be a practical impossibility for the board to check the ward registrations against its master list of qualified voters.
Proponents of the bill said it was designed to facilitate getting out the vote, by making registration more convenient. Under the existing permanent registration law voters must go to the headquarters of the Board of Election Commissioners to register, but this need be done only once.

GIRAUD ARRIVES IN WASHINGTON TO SEE ROOSEVELT

Giraud was accompanied also by Lieut. Col. Leon E. Dostert of the United States Army.
Maj. Beaufre was chief of staff to Maj. Gen. Doumenc during the war in France in 1939 and 1940, and after the armistice was sent to Africa, where he was arrested in May, 1941, by Vichy police on German orders, and charged with plotting against the Vichy-German regime. He was held prisoner for seven months, and after his release worked for the underground movement in Southern France. He commanded a battalion during the last weeks of the Tunisian campaign.
Maj. Poniatowski is a member of the French branch of a Polish family which played an important part in the struggle for Polish independence. He is a 38-year-old reserve officer, whose elder brother, Prince Jean Poniatowski, is a prisoner of the Germans.
Lieut. Viret comes from Marseille, where he was an officer of the French merchant fleet. He is now serving in the Navy as a reserve officer.
The White House twice has emphasized the military nature of Giraud's trip to Washington and has said its purpose was for discussing the conduct of the war with the Axis and consultation with the combined British-American chiefs of staff here.

Algiers French Name Delegate to Deal With Antilles.
ALGIERS, July 7 (AP). — The French Committee of National Liberation today appointed Marcel Hoppenot, who now is in Washington, as a delegate with extraordinary powers to negotiate the return of the French Antilles to the unified empire, a spokesman said today.
The only parts of the French Antilles not siding yet with the committee are Martinique and Guadeloupe, whose administrator, Admiral Georges Robert, invited the United States last week to name an envoy to discuss a "change" in French authority there.
At the same time the committee appointed Brig. Gen. Henri Jacomy commander of the French military forces in the Antilles and French Guiana. Observers interpreted this to mean that the committee would not consent to retaining Admiral Robert as governor of Martinique regardless of the outcome of the negotiations.
The French spokesman here said there was no confirmation as yet that Martinique has already joined the empire. Earlier, the French Commissariat of Information announced that a Deputy Severe of Martinique had sent a message asserting that the island had "rallied enthusiastically to the French Committee of National Liberation and demanded the immediate designation of new authorities."

COMMUNISTS SUPPORT HAGUE AS WAY TO BACK ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, July 7 (AP). — An article by a Communist leader in the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, yesterday endorsed Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, who five years ago was carrying on a self-styled "war on Reds and radicals."
The article, signed by William Norman, state secretary of the New Jersey Communist party, which said that the perpetuation of "a misconception . . . with regard to Frank Hague and so-called Haguelism" was a design for "an attack against the President."
"The fact is that Frank Hague supports the President and the President's win-the-war policies," the article contended. "This is indisputable and is a major test today."
In Jersey City, Hague commented, "I don't know anything about it."

ST. LOUISAN'S SANDWICH A HIT WITH RICKENBACKER

(Picture in Everyday Magazine)
A visit made by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker to a North African Army Air Forces base, during which he sampled a St. Louisan's special sandwich formula and "downed it as swiftly and completely as he ever downed an enemy plane," was described in a letter from Capt. George W. Trefts to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Trefts, 730 Atalanta avenue, Webster Groves.
"We traded cigarettes to the natives for the ingredients for sandwiches," Capt. Trefts wrote. "Rickenbacker captured and destroyed one just after I had launched it off the fire." The ingredients included sliced Bermuda onions, melted cheese, a fried egg, toasted bread and butter.
Accompanying the letter was a photograph of the 24-year-old St. Louisan taken with Rickenbacker and several other officers.
Capt. Trefts, a graduate of Purdue University, was returning from Sweden, where he had been studying engineering, when war broke out and enlisted in the Tank Corps in February, 1941. Later he transferred to the Army Air Forces and was trained at Chanute Field Ground Corps Officer Training School.

SURVEY INQUIRY COOLS OFF INTO AMICABLE TALK

Legislative Committee Questions Business Men, but Fails to Have Director Arnett Fired.

By CURTIS A. BETTS
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—The Legislative investigation of the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, a privately-supported taxpayers' organization, became an amicable conference last night after a month of recrimination, threats of contempt proceedings in the Legislature and threats of court action to test the powers of the House of Representatives to examine the private records of the survey.

Frank C. Rand, chairman of the Board of the International Shoe Co. and L. Wade Childress, president of the Laclede Gas Light Co., who were among the organizers of the survey and are active in its affairs, appeared with J. R. Fulton, its president.

Rand and Childress staunchly defended Keeton Arnett, executive director of the Survey, who has been under fire of irate House members because of his caustic public comments on extravagance of legislative appropriations.

The questioning by committee members and three assistant Attorneys General indicated there had been a marked cooling of the ardor which characterized the early proceedings. The committee no longer asked for a list of the contributors to the survey's budget, which was one of the principal objectives at the start of the investigation, and which had been refused.

There were inferences to be drawn from some of the questions that the inquiry would be satisfied if the heads of the organization would repudiate Arnett. This they refused to do. In answer to adroit questions they admitted that they would not countenance misrepresentations, unjustified criticism of members of the Legislature or attacks to undermine public confidence in the Government of which committee members accused Arnett, but they were careful to avoid any expression which would indicate they believed Arnett had been guilty of misrepresentation, or that his criticism was unjustified.

In response to a question by Representative Joe H. Miller as to whether he "could see anything wrong in co-operating with the Legislature," Rand answered: "Not necessarily, but if you think I endorse all the Legislature has done you are mistaken."

The committee was interested in learning that Arnett received a salary of $10,000 a year, and that the International Shoe Co. contributed $3000 a year to the organization, the Laclede Gas Co. $1000 a year, and the Columbia Terminals Co. $500. Originally the committee had demanded the names of all contributors, of whom there are about 600, and the amount each subscribed, but last night it asked only for the amounts contributed by companies with whom those who appeared are connected.

Rand gave a detailed account of the organization of the survey in 1940 after a group of business men in St. Louis had learned of the success of a similar organization in New York. Approximately 70 St. Louis business men inaugurated the organization, which now has 600 contributing members, two-thirds of whom reside in the smaller cities and towns of the State.

Rand explained its purpose was to arouse a tax consciousness among the people of the State and an interest in economical administration of State, county and municipal governments, with the expectation that members of the Legislature and county and municipal officials would be influenced by the force of public opinion to guard public expenditures. The three sponsors who appeared expressed surprise at statements by committee members that Arnett had refused to furnish the appropriations committee with the source of his information in preparing a "taxpayers' budget" which was considerably lower than the budget set up in the House appropriation bills. Arnett has repeatedly stated that the information was available whenever called for. Chairman C. F. Jung of the appropriations committee testified several weeks ago that Arnett had refused to supply it.

The final decision last night was that Arnett would appear Thursday morning with information about the budget, which, of course, is of no use to the committee, the appropriation bills having passed the House and nearly all having been agreed upon by conference committees of the Senate and House. The committee will not get what it started out to get, which was Arnett's discharge from his job, but in a way it will save its face.

ADmits 2 ROBBERIES OF STORE

Pollack's Market, Inc., 1213 North Thirteenth street, was robbed last night for a second time in less than a month and James Lewis, Negro, 1438 Hadley street, who was captured by police while attempting to escape through a skylight, admitted both robberies, police announced today.

Lewis carried $16.84 in a tin can when arrested. He said that he took it from a cash drawer. On June 16, he said, he took $105 from the same drawer.

Germans Beaten Back By Reds Near Belgorod

ate two populated places, but that two hours later the Soviets counterattacked, halting any further enemy advance and somewhat restoring the Soviet positions. (The Red Army newspaper Red Star was quoted by Reuters, British news agency, as saying that the Russians had partly restored their lines in the vicinity of two villages, previously captured by the Germans, in the vicinity of Belgorod.) No separate Russian noon communique was issued today and there was no immediate announcement as to the reason, or whether this marked a permanent new policy.

Nazis Paying High Price.

Advices from the front pictured great battles taking a terrible toll in blood and armor. Four German infantry columns were reported to have attacked near Mtsensk, 30 miles from Orel, to be driven back with 600 men killed. One column won and held Russian trenches briefly before falling back in a Soviet counterattack.

Russian planes hammered again and again at German concentrations of men and supplies behind the lines, and the Russians said the Germans, apparently hurrying their plans, used aircraft principally for direct support of infantry and tanks in battle, and were not striking at the Soviet rear.

The Red Army announced last night that in two days it had smashed 1271 tanks and shot down 314 planes and killed more than 13,000 German troops.

The Russians counted the German loss in tanks at 856 for the first day's fighting. The noon communique yesterday increased the figure by 152 and last night the Soviet Information Bureau added another 423 in a special communique. The regular midnight communique later listed 110 German tanks destroyed, in the Orel-Kursk sector.

Air Support for Foe.

The attacks all along the front were strongly supported by the German air force and the Russians said they believed large forces of German planes had been shifted from Western European bases for the drive.

The midnight communique reported the destruction of 111 German planes and said 22 flyers had been captured. One of the prisoners was said to have told Red Army officers that he was a member of the seventh detachment of the first squadron of dive bombers and had been based in Yugoslavia prior to the start of the new German offensive.

The Russians said that despite the heavy reinforcements to the German air forces the enemy had failed to achieve air superiority and that in one sector alone 45 planes were downed.

3000 Germans Killed.

The midnight communique added 3000 German dead to a previously reported total of 10,000 in the first 36 hours of the gigantic battle. These 3000 officers and men, the Russians said, were wiped out by one formation in the Orel-Kursk direction where a 400-tank German attack was stopped at a cost of 110 enemy tanks, German tanks and infantry attacked in this sector "constantly," the communique said.

Principal factor in the success of the Soviet defense seemed to be the Red Army heavy artillery which rolled back the assaults of the heavy German tanks. As the armored divisions faltered and turned tail, Red Army infantry dashed from dugouts and slit trenches to engage the enemy in hand-to-hand combat.

Land Suitable for Tanks.

The German Army, obviously planning for a major blow at the Russian Army, picked its battlefield with an eye to providing terrain most suitable for the massing of its armored strength. The land around Orel, Sevsk and Kursk is flat, similar to that around Bryansk about 90 miles to the west where the Germans flung their heavy equipment against the Russians a year ago.

The Germans sent 300 to 400 tanks at a time into the battle only to have them smashed back by the Soviet artillery and low-flying Sturmoviks, battlefront reports said.

Frequently on the Orel-Kursk front they would switch from frontal attacks to attempts at flanking operations. In one clash the Russians were said to have attacked the flank of attacking Germans, sending them reeling away into a Soviet minefield where they lost 31 tanks and 600 men killed.

Continuing to assert that the Russians had begun the offensive, the German communique said that heavy Soviet attacks in the Belgorod area "by very strong forces which had been concentrated for weeks, failed."

German troops penetrated deeply into Russian positions, inflicting very heavy losses, said the broadcast communique. The radio asserted that 300 Soviet tanks had been destroyed or put out of action, and said 637 Russian planes were destroyed Monday and Tuesday against loss of 41 Nazi aircraft.

The Berlin radio said that Soviet tanks engaged in the fighting included "completely new models, partly Russian and partly American in origin."

The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio said that German reserves had been rushed to sectors "particularly threatened by Soviet attacks," and that "fighting on a still larger scale must be expected soon."

GERBINI AIRDROME BOMBED WITHOUT LETUP BY ALLIES

pounded railway installations at Catania, eastern Sicilian port.

Little Opposition.

Axis fighter opposition which reached a peak Monday, when more than 100 planes attacked a single formation of 27 Flying Fortresses, dwindled yesterday to almost nothing, returning pilots reported.

Veteran observers cautioned against jumping to the conclusion that the Allies have won complete air supremacy over Sicily, but the sudden falling off in enemy fighter interception indicated that the Germans had lost most of their Sicilian-based land planes and were in need of reinforcements.

Only one small group of enemy fighters approached an American bombing mission yesterday, and escorting Lightnings drove them off.

American Mitchell medium bombers struck in two formations against Biscari airfield in south-east Sicily on Monday night. Despite a furious anti-aircraft barrage, the bombers "hit the target right on the nose," observers reported. One bomb apparently scored a direct hit on an ammunition dump.

Besides continuous bomber missions, yesterday's operations produced many effective fighter-bomber sweeps in which military targets of all kinds on Sicily were surprised, bombed and strafed.

Since the fall of Pantelleria on June 11 the Northwest African air force alone has destroyed 275 enemy aircraft in the air and has lost 83. Add to this the enemy planes wrecked on the ground—estimated by observers at several hundred—and the ratio of plane destruction goes up to 6-1 or 7-1 in favor of the Allies.

(A dispatch from Cairo disclosed that 85 American Liberators took part in Monday's assault on Messina in Sicily and dropped a record total for the Middle East command of nearly 250 tons of bombs on the big ferry terminal. It said that "aerial photography now indicates that damage to terminal facilities and railway facilities was even more extensive than first reported.")

An Italian communique today listed 40 persons killed and six injured yesterday in Catania province, where the Gerbini airfield is situated. The broadcast said other points attacked on Sicily included Palermo, Trapani, Porto Empedocle, Catania and Marsala, and asserted 19 Allied aircraft were shot down.

An Allied submarine was sunk in the Mediterranean by Italian and German naval units, the Italian communique said.

The Algiers radio reported that the port of Ostia, at the mouth of the Tiber near Rome, had been closed to the public and to shipping as a result of an Allied raid last Saturday night.

SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS CITY TAX ON LACLEDE POWER

JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—A St. Louis ordinance requiring the Laclede Power & Light Co. of St. Louis to pay a license tax of 5 per cent of its gross proceeds, for the privilege of selling electric power, was declared valid late yesterday by division No. 2 of the Missouri Supreme Court.

The opinion, written by Supreme Court Commissioner Paul W. Barrett and concurred in by all of the judges of division No. 2, reversed a decision by Circuit Judge David J. Murphy of St. Louis, holding the ordinance unconstitutional.

The test case was one of several in recent years in which the Laclede Power & Light Co. and its affiliate and predecessor, the Laclede Gas Light Co., have opposed franchise, occupational or license taxes the city sought to collect. Similar levies of 5 per cent of gross proceeds are paid by other public utilities in St. Louis.

4TH OF JULY MADE TRAVEL HISTORY

... but, please, don't make history repeat!

We have just carried the greatest passenger volume in New York Central history.

And we want to thank those who rode our trains last week-end for being good sports in a difficult situation.

We threw into the job every available man, locomotive, Pullman car, coach and diner. But there just weren't enough to handle in comfort all the fighters on furlough, wartime business travelers, and civilians trying to get away for a few days rest.

If war could have taken the week-end off, things might have been better. But war knows no holidays.

The war freights had to keep rolling. So did the troop trains which now use half the Pullmans and a third of the coaches. And, of course, there was no way of recalling for the occasion the 21,000 experienced New York Central workers now in the armed services.

It's over now. We did our level best. And we appreciate the good natured understanding everyone showed, but we hope that Fourth of July history won't be repeated every week-end from now till Labor Day.

Serving on America's vital supply line, we have a war job to do. That is why the Government and we of New York Central urge you... this summer especially... to travel on essential business only. Help keep the tracks clear for Victory.

MRS. LUCE SAYS CONGRESS WILL END BAR ON CHINESE

NEW YORK, July 7 (AP). — Representative Clara Boothe Luce (Rep.), Connecticut, predicts that repeal of the Oriental Exclusion Acts will be sought at the next session of Congress and Chinese will be put under the quota system.

In a speech last night at a forum of the Institute of Arts and Sciences at Columbia University, she termed the Exclusion Acts a "gross insult to the Chinese people."

Postwar Plans for Own Concerns Urged on St. Louis Business Heads

Executives Should Map Steps Now, Says William McClellan, Chairman of Regional Economic Development Group.

Business executives were urged to form definite postwar plans for their concerns, in the address of William McClellan, board chairman of Union Electric Co. of Missouri, and chairman of the St. Louis Regional Committee for Economic Development, before the Advertising Club at Hotel Statler yesterday.

Purchasing power after the war, McClellan told the advertising men, will depend on "a prosperous people—a people with jobs producing usable, saleable goods."

He estimated that jobs might have to be found, in the St. Louis area, for 300,000 men and women. "Some will go back to farms or to home life," he said, "but the great majority will want jobs in industry. No matter how the war ends, or how demobilization is handled, the problem will come to us very suddenly."

Industry's Big Task.
"To create all the jobs, industry faces a tremendous task. We are not going back to the prewar world. We are going into a new one. War invention and research have made enormous changes in the availability of old and new materials. New methods and new machines will come into the game. Relative costs of these new materials and machinery will upset all data on old production costs. We shall hardly recognize many of the old products in their new design and materials. Many, many new products will replace old ones or for new uses."

"Many a manufacturer will find his old market gone and will be hunting a new one. Many a manufacturer will find that some new device, implement, or product has superseded his former one. Many plants have been dislocated for war production, and what is the restored plant to look like?"

"Perhaps the manufacturer formerly used furnaces and now must turn to presses. Perhaps he worked in metals and now must use plastics. Perhaps he used steel and now must turn to aluminum or magnesium. With all these uncertainties ahead of him, the manufacturer who doesn't want a severe postwar headache, yes, perhaps a postwar breakdown, had better think right now what he is going to do about it. To save his own neck and to do his share in creating jobs that will save his country from untold misery and keep it from slipping into the mire of extreme socialism and even anarchy, he had better do two things."

"First, he should plan and plan for his individual business. Find out what he is going to do and how he is going to do it. Nobody, no committee, no trade association can do this for him. Others can furnish him information about materials, methods, markets, and finance but he must do his own planning."

"Second, he can individually and united with others exert all his influence on his government to create an atmosphere in which the American genius for organization, invention, risk-taking and progressiveness will be free to achieve its great possibilities."

"This does not mean going back to the old reckless, irresponsible laissez-faire of some years ago. Big business is inevitable in the future in all countries, and proper supervision and regulation of business is just as inevitable. But supervision and regulation can stop far short of direction and management and leave business free to use its mighty sinews for the upbuilding and prosperity of the country."

Outline Committee's Plan.
McClellan outlined the plan of the Committee for Economic Development to arouse business heads to the necessity of planning the future of their own concerns, and to strive for policies of government which shall give business men the chance to work out their plans in "a healthy atmosphere of free enterprise."

"Our greatest, most important task here in the St. Louis region," McClellan said, "is to get everybody thoroughly roused to the direful need for planning, hoping every other district will be roused also. To make every business head understand he must do his own planning to save himself and the community. Our committee now has a list of 2400 large and small industries alone which must be spurred to do their utmost. These do not include all sorts of commercial concerns, which run to thousands more. How to fire them all up and get them at the job, this would seem to be something decidedly in your line as advertising men."

STATE SOIL CONSERVATION BILL SENT TO GOVERNOR
Special to the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—The State Soil Conservation Bill, authorizing farmers to organize by counties or townships to combat soil erosion in co-operation with the Federal Government, was passed today and sent to Gov. Donnell for signature.

Legislative action was completed when the House voted to withdraw amendments it had added to the bill, after the Senate had refused to accept the amendments and asked the House to recede.

AID DENIES STORY FRANK C. WALKER USED LOADED DICE
WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—If Postmaster General Frank C. Walker ever threw dice it was in a friendly game of backgammon or parcheesi, one of his assistants said today.

Testimony that Walker once broke up a dice game in his home by winning all the money, only to learn to his mortification that he had been using loaded dice, was so "ridiculous" that Walker "wouldn't dignify it with an answer," the assistant said.

The story of the dice was told in passing by H. H. Roswell, publisher of the National Police Gazette, who appeared at a Post-office Department hearing on his application for restoration of the magazine's second class mail privilege.

The privilege was revoked by Walker last September on the ground that the Gazette had published "lewd and lascivious" matter, but Roswell said he never had been able to find out just what part of his publication was objectionable.

On one occasion, he said Walker expressed objection to dice advertisements in the magazine, remarking that he had bought a pair in a drug store once to use in entertaining friends at his home. He was embarrassed no end, Roswell said Walker told him, to learn after winning all the money that one of the cubes was loaded, or weighted in such a way that one number turned up more frequently than any other.

In 1933, Firestone built the FIRST synthetic rubber airplane tires for our armed forces. In 1934, Firestone built its FIRST synthetic rubber passenger car tires. In 1940, Firestone FIRST went into production on synthetic rubber passenger car tires and began the manufacture of its own synthetic rubber, called Butaprene, the same type that was later adopted by the Government. And today Firestone is making synthetic rubber tires for passenger cars, trucks, buses, airplanes, tractors, farm implements and all types of war vehicles.

As a result of this leadership and experience, the Firestone DeLuxe Champion Tire, for mileage, strength and safety, upholds the Firestone tradition of "Best in Rubber, Synthetic or Natural."

FLYER OFF THE BEAM BOMBED OKLAHOMA TOWN BY MISTAKE

BOISE CITY, Ok., July 7 (AP).—Two just a Yankee airman off the beam, residents here learned with belated comfort—after five small bombs had come crashing down early yesterday in a noisy climax to a July 4 celebration. The "air raid" was halted only when the master switch at the light plant was pulled, blacking out the town.

Officers at the Dalhart, (Tex.), Army Air Base said the plane was one of a group which left Dalhart to bomb a practice range near Conlen, Tex., 30 miles south of Boise City. It apparently got off course and the pilot mistook Boise City for the practice range, the officers explained.

No one was injured and property damage was slight. One of the practice bombs, loaded with sand and a small powder charge, knocked a hole in the Baptist Church. Another damaged a garage.

WLB GRANTS UNION SECURITY IN TWO ST. LOUIS CASES

Acts on Counsel's Opinion Smith-Connally Act Does Not Alter Board's Policy.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—The War Labor Board announced yesterday its first maintenance-of-membership orders since enactment of the War Labor Disputes (Smith-Connally) act, evidencing its belief that the law does not alter board policy on union security.

Chairman William H. Davis said the board acted in the light of opinion from counsel that the act did not make such directives unlawful.

The cases in which the orders apply involve the McQuay-Norris Co., St. Louis and Indianapolis, and the CIO United Auto Workers; Hermann Oak Leather Co., St. Louis, and the AFL Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers; the United Cork Co., South Kearny, N. J., and the CIO United Rubber Workers.

Industry members of the Board dissented from the decision, but WLB sources said that was not significant, because they cast negative votes on most union maintenance decisions prior to enactment of the law.

The possibility of a challenge arises under a section of the law saying that the Board shall conform to the provisions of the National Labor Relations (Wagner) Act. The Wagner Act recognizes closed shop agreements, and it is the Board's position that maintenance-of-membership, being less inclusive, also is covered.

The WLB standard maintenance-of-membership clause, used in the three cases, provides that employees who are union members may withdraw within 15 days. If they do not do so, they are considered bound to maintain membership for the duration of the contract as a condition of employment. New employees are not bound to join the union, but if they do voluntarily, they are bound by the maintenance clause.

Negotiations between McQuay-Norris Co. and the United Auto Workers began in January, and the controversy was submitted to the WLB Feb. 19. A 3-man panel of the Board on May 29 recommended a flat wage increase of 5 cents an hour for about 8000 workers in the company's two but let-core plants. The panel rejected the union's demand for a union shop, but specified maintenance of union membership. The Board took jurisdiction in the case of the Hermann Oak Leather Co., 4066 North First street, after a walkout of 75 employees in July, 1942.

HOLDS NAVY WAS 'MANEUVERED' IN ELK HILLS DEAL

Congressman Says No Oil Would Have Been Obtained for War Needs Under Contract.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—Representative Peterson (Dem., Georgia), told the House Public Lands Committee yesterday he believed Standard Oil of California had "maneuvered" the Navy Department into a contract for development of the Elk Hills petroleum reserve which gave Standard title to more than half the production there.

Peterson, a member of the committee, is investigating the now abrogated contract, also charged that the agreement was so drawn that the Navy, despite its wartime need for oil, would have obtained no supplies from the big reserve during the emergency.

In assailing the contract terms, Peterson said: "We haven't saved one barrel of oil for the public, and from here on out have given Standard a monopoly of the Elk Hills oil."

"We are tying up in the hands of Standard, our virgin fields which have never been touched," says Title Favored Standard.

Peterson asserted that although Standard owns "a minority" of the Elk Hills property, it gained title through the agreement to approximately 55 per cent of the oil produced there.

"Navy wants oil and Standard wants oil," he contended. "Clearly Standard is getting what it wants not only from its own property but also out of property owned by the Navy."

Declaring he believed the contract mutually benefitted the Navy and Standard, Ralph W. Richards, Federal geologist who surveyed Elk Hills for the Navy, said the Navy had no intention of going into the oil production business and that Standard was serving the Government by producing oil.

The contract provided Standard was to be repaid in oil or cash for cost of production. However, quoting from a report by Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell, Peterson said the contract was of "such a nature that it is entirely in the hands of Standard whether it takes cash or oil."

Change in Attitude. At the conclusion of his statement, Peterson asked Richards if he still thought the contract was a good one.

The geologist, who previously testified he believed the transaction was in the best public interest, replied he would have to consider the question "carefully."

R. Keith Kane, legal adviser to the Navy Department, told the committee statements made by Littell "reveal a complete misunderstanding" of the engineering report made of the Elk Hills area.

STATE LOSES FIGHT OVER TAX-EXEMPT U. S. SECURITIES

Hyde, who wrote the opinion quashing the assessment, said the decisive question was whether there was a valid ownership of nontaxable property. He quoted former Supreme Court rulings that there was no fraud in doing a lawful act, and "a court does not inquire into one's motives for doing a lawful act."

Reviewing the circumstances of the Yantis transaction, Judge Hyde said "We must hold that this is a case of actual bona fide rightful ownership of nontaxable property on June 1, 1941, and that motives for such ownership are immaterial."

In suggesting, in effect, that the remedy rested with the Legislature as to the assessment method, Judge Hyde said Missouri now used the "period method" in assessing merchants' taxes—the highest amount of goods held in the period from the first Monday in March to the first Monday in June.

"The Legislature has not seen fit to apply it (the period method) to property taxes," he said, "and neither the executive nor the judicial branch of the Government may do so."

All of the other Judges of Court en banc concurred except Judge Ernest S. Gantt, who was absent.

Man, 74, Dies of Gas Fumes Henry Temme, 2100 1/2 Blair avenue, unemployed, died of gas poisoning yesterday at Max C. Starkloff Hospital. He was found Monday by his brother, William, with his head near an open gas jet in the kitchen at his home. He was 74 years old. William Temme said his brother had been ill six months.

WIDOW CAN'T FIND REPUTED $100,000 NEWELL NEST EGG

Her Attorney Says He Has Searched Banks in Vain for Late Racketeer's Funds.

The widow of Joseph (Buck) Newell, convinced that he had accumulated a nest egg of $100,000 or more in his career as a labor racketeer, hasn't been able to put her hands on a dime of whatever money he may have had.

Her attorney, Sigmund M. Bass, told a Post-Dispatch reporter today he had searched the records of every bank with which Newell might have done business, and found no record of any bank account or safe deposit box in Newell's name.

Bass said he would like to talk with Newell's secretary, Miss Doris Bay, to learn whether she could shed any light on where Newell kept the money he is presumed to have had.

Kept Business to Himself.

"He kept his business to himself—you know better than I do the reasons for that," Bass said in telling of the search for Newell's estate.

Newell, boss of the AFL Holisting

Engineers' Union, was shot and killed last month by his 16-year-old stepson, William R. Grasswick in his country home near Pevely. That piece of real estate, for which Mrs. Newell paid $10,000 cash, is in her name.

Bass, acting for Mrs. Newell, applied for administration of Newell's estate in the Probate Court at Hillsboro July 17, setting out that Newell died intestate. Mrs. Newell was appointed administratrix, but so far she hasn't found anything to administer.

Newell's business necessarily was conducted on a cash basis. He collected from employer and employee alike and as sidelines operated a gambling establishment and as "good will" representative of an oil company with which contractors who had labor relations with him found it expedient to do business.

Perhaps your hair, too, needs the skilled attention of a Thomas expert. Perhaps you are worried about dandruff scales, or scalp itch which dandruff and other local excrement causes. Why not do as Mr. Crosby did (and as 1600 other men do each day!)—consult a Thomas expert. Come in today and see for yourself exactly how Thomas removes dandruff scales, and leaves your scalp tingling with a fresh, clean, healthy feeling. Symbol of Progress

Like radio, electric refrigerators and many other modern conveniences, the streamlined train has become an accepted part of our lives. It symbolizes the progressive spirit of American industry—of individual enterprise.

Union Pacific developed the first streamlined train during the depression era; an outstanding example of foresighted engineering and executive genius. It is largely due to this same spirit of progress that miracles in war production have been achieved by our country's industrial plants; it is the spirit that has spurred our railroads to accomplish seemingly superhuman tasks in the transportation of war materials and troops.

It is this spirit of progress, this truly American characteristic, that will eliminate the Axis. Union Pacific, for its part, will continue to "keep 'em rolling."

CIVILIAN DEFENSE PUT INTO POLITICS, STEPHENS QUILTS

Program Under Commission Controlled by State Officials.

By HERBERT A. TRASK.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—State Civilian Defense Administrator Hugh Stephens resigned yesterday in protest against the passage of a civilian defense bill which abolishes the present non-political State Council of Defense and puts the program under a war emergency commission controlled by State officials.

Stephens, who had previously said he would quit if the bill was passed, announced his resignation shortly after the House approved Senate amendments to the measure and sent it to Gov. Donnell for approval.

"Passage of the Civilian Defense Substitute bill lets me out as administrator," Stephens said in a statement. "Final debate showed that to be one purpose of the bill."

Blaming politics for enactment of the new law, the former administrator asserted the change was wanted by persons seeking jobs and those who view civilian defense, with its 500,000 volunteer workers in Missouri, as politically potential.

Other Criticism of Bill.

He said there had been no criticism of the non-paid defense council which had made the State's defense program one of the most efficient in the country. He criticized the bill on the ground that it placed supervision of the local civilian defense measures, agencies and personnel in the hands of the various county courts, and gave the courts power to appoint members of the local rationing boards instead of the non-political local councils of defense.

The bill passed by the Legislature was a substitute for one recommended by the present State Council of Defense. Stephens asserted that, under the substitute, Missouri was the only State in this area which had no blackout law, and the only State in the country which made the volunteer workers personally liable for accidents happening in connection with the performance of their duties.

Omissions in Measure.

Also omitted are provisions under which fire fighting equipment could be exchanged by St. Louis and St. Louis County and State equipment and personnel would be made available wherever needed in emergencies. Stephens said Gov. Donnell might be forced to sign the measure because the regional civilian defense office was waiting to hold three unannounced blackouts in the area this month.

Under the bill the War Emergency Commission comprise, the Governor, Adjutant General, President pro tem of the Senate, Speaker of the House and a Judge of the State Supreme Court, and has power to promulgate rules and regulations governing blackouts and other civilian defense activities. A new council of defense would be appointed by the commission, to assist in the recruiting and training of civilian defense workers.

Death Sentence Held Up.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—The death sentence of Willie Wright, St. Louis Negro, set for July 23 in the lethal gas chamber in the State penitentiary here after Missouri Supreme Court last month affirmed his conviction, was suspended yesterday when the court granted a rehearing of his appeal. Division No. 2 of the court, which affirmed the conviction last June 7, ordered a transfer of the case to the court en banc, on its own motion, for a new hearing. Wright was sentenced to death for murder.

Fatalities Lower

Injuries on our fighting fronts are heavier than during the first World War but fatalities are much lower owing to the increased care and aid our medical units are affording the wounded.

Operating tables in base hospitals cost $400 each, and our War Bonds will have to buy thousands of them to provide our wounded with every chance to recover.

War on the home front entails some discomforts and hardships, but workers are also afforded the opportunity of saving their money with the safest depository in the world—The United States Treasury. "Figure It Out Yourself."

INSURANCE INJUNCTION DENIED BY MISSOURI SUPREME COURT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 7.—An injunction sought by Attorney General Roy McKittick to restrain 123 stock fire insurance companies from collecting alleged excessive fire insurance rates pending a final decision in McKittick's pending ouster suit against these companies, was denied late yesterday by the Missouri Supreme Court en banc.

The ruling does not affect the status of the ouster suit, now pending in the Supreme Court, in which McKittick charges the companies with violating the State antitrust laws and with knowledge of the bribery which led to a compromise of Missouri fire insurance rate litigation in 1935.

McKittick, in asking for the injunction, declared the only legal level of fire insurance rates in Missouri was that fixed after the courts, in 1929, sustained a 10 per cent rate reduction ordered by the State in 1922. He charged a later and higher rate level, approved by former State Insurance Superintendent R. Emmet O'Malley in November, 1935, as a result of the discredited 1935 rate compromise, was obtained by fraud and bribery, and was void.

Supreme Judge James M. Douglas, who wrote the opinion sustaining the company demurrer to McKittick's opinion, said the question of the legality of existing fire insurance rates was one of the controversial issues in the pending ouster suit.

ROOSEVELT TELLS CHINESE PROMISES OF HELP FROM AMERICA ARE BEING KEPT

President's Radio Greeting on Sixth Anniversary of Ally's War With Japan Recounts That Pledges Are 'All Being Borne Out Today.'

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP). PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT sent a special short wave radio greeting to the people of China today on the sixth anniversary of their resistance to Japanese aggression.

The message, read for the President in a transmission from San Francisco to Chungking, was followed by recorded excerpts from earlier addresses by Roosevelt.

"Our friends have long known what our enemies are learning today," the message declared, "that the promises of the United States are always kept and our pledges are always redeemed."

"The statements which follow have been made by me at various times since we joined hands with you in this war. It is good to know that the hopes and promises I expressed on these former occasions are all being borne out today."

"I send you, the people of China, the heartfelt greetings of your partners, the people of the United States."

There followed these reproductions of past addresses by the President:

"... We are fighting on the same side as the brave people of China, those millions who for years have withstood bombs and starvation and have whipped the invaders time and again in spite of the superior Japanese equipment and arms."

"Chungking has been almost wiped out of existence, yet it remains the capital of an unbeatable China. That is the conquering spirit which prevails throughout the United Nations in this war."

"No matter what advances the Japanese may make, ways will be found to deliver airplanes and munitions of war to the armies of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek."

"The common needs of all humanity are joining the culture of Asia with the culture of Europe and the culture of the Americas for the first time, a real world civilization."

JAPAN AT WEAKEST NOW, CHIANG SAYS

CHUNGKING, July 7 (AP). Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek issued a call today to the United Nations to strike at once in force against Japan because now, he declared, is the opportune moment "to reap great results" in reducing the time and cost of final victory.

In a message to the people of the Allied nations on the anniversary of the day six years ago that China was attacked, he asserted that Japan "in one sense is at her weakest as her ready resources are approaching a point of exhaustion."

"Should we let her have further respite to complete impregnable defenses and to wage a long drawn-out war with us," he added, "the time and price the Allies will have to pay to defeat her will be many times longer and heavier than what are required today."

(In an anniversary greeting sent from London, Prime Minister Churchill told the Generalissimo the successes in North Africa and on the Yangtze gave "tangible evidence in the east and the west of what is to come" and said "the pattern of events is now becoming clear.")

Roosevelt-Churchill Agreement.

Chiang urged full support of the Roosevelt-Churchill agreement to "wage the war on the Japanese and European fronts with equal power."

"In the execution of this strategy," he promised, "our Allies can count upon the determination of the Chinese army to contribute whatever is within their power and to make whatever sacrifices necessary."

Chiang ruled out any "negotiated peace," insisted it should be one "seeking the emancipation of entire mankind," and declared:

"The United Nations should set up at the earliest possible moment a joint machinery for the winning of the peace as well as the efficient prosecution of the war."

Postwar Organization.

"To safeguard international justice and collective security and to insure the successful functioning of democratic governments after the war, there must be a postwar world organization with the solid backing of an international force."

He assured his own people that this would be "the decisive year" of the war, one in which the foundation of ultimate victory will be laid, and a start at least made toward driving out the invaders through "an unending stream of victories."

The Generalissimo was decorated today as chief commander, Legion of Merit, by Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, United States commanding general for China, India and Burma, representing President Roosevelt.

Gen. Ho Ying-chin, Minister of War, and Gen. Sheng Chen, director of the National Military Council, were made commanders of the Legion of Merit.

The decorations were presented in the presence of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, making her first appearance since her return from the United States.

Gen. Giraud Arrives in U. S. Capital

Came in hand, GEN. HENRI GIRAUD, commander of French forces in North Africa, leaves the plane in which he arrived in Washington today for conferences with President Roosevelt and Allied military chiefs. Members of his staff follow him down the steps.

War Output In May Failed To Exceed April

Lag in Arms Production Offsets Gains in Planes and Warships.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP). PRODUCTION of planes and naval vessels reached new highs in May, the War Department Production Board's monthly report showed today, but the over-all output of munitions remained unchanged from April.

Chairman Donald M. Nelson's report noted declines in ground ordnance, miscellaneous munitions and merchant vessels, which he described as a "very serious matter."

The decline in merchant vessels was based on the value of work put in place in shipyards, however, and not on the basis of actual deliveries, which in May were the highest so far in nearly 1,800,000 deadweight tons.

Of the four major programs, merchant ships led in the first six months of the year, with 44 per cent of the 1943 goal achieved. Army ordnance and the output of naval vessels and equipment were estimated at 40 per cent of the 1943 goals, and aircraft 35 per cent.

"We have reached a point now where gains in production will be won only through the most thoughtful and determined effort on the part of all concerned," Nelson said.

He called for the setting aside of personal and group interests "in the interests of all of us as much as it is humanly possible, for we are on the verge of one of the greatest trials of our national history."

Presumably referring to forthcoming military operations, he said: "We cannot afford to relax our efforts for an instant. On the contrary, we must prepare ourselves to meet calmly and steadily the greatest strains to which we may ever be subjected."

The May production record, as compared with April:

Total munitions, unchanged; aircraft and aircraft equipment, up 5 per cent; ground ordnance, down 3 per cent; Navy and Army vessels (value put in place), up 2 per cent; merchant vessels (value put in place), down 4 per cent; miscellaneous munitions, down 7 per cent.

Measured on a dollar basis, aircraft and related munitions and equipment production increased 5 per cent, but on the basis of planes alone the increase was 9 per cent, and 10 per cent if calculated on the basis of airframe weight.

Without disclosing figures, Nelson reported the "tendency continued to be toward production of heavier planes." Such planes would include four-engine bombers to carry the war to the enemy.

Deliveries of all bombers were ahead of schedule, the report said, while the heavy bomber program was almost on schedule. Difficulties were reported in the production of Army fighter planes, although navy fighter production went up 18 per cent in number and the number of single-engine bombers went up 49 per cent.

All ground ordnance programs were behind except Army ammunition which increased 6 per cent over April. Signal equipment ran 7 per cent behind.

A bright spot in the report was a new record in tanker production, which went to a new high as the result of delivery of vessels not scheduled for completion until June. Output of minor types of merchant ships was advanced also by delivery of four large carriers, sending the tonnage for this category beyond 100,000 tons for the first time.

Naval vessels aggregating 204,000 displacement tons were completed in May, an increase of 30 per cent over April, and 9 per cent over the first time.

Steinbeck Says Yanks in London Fret Over Fighting on Home Front

Four Americans Get Together on July 4 and Trade Views on Coal Strike, Political Feuds and Strife in General.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1943.)

LONDON, July 6 (Delayed). THEY got together simply because they sat on the same bench at the Red Cross Hotel in London—four soldiers with 48-hour passes over the Fourth of July in London. They did not come from the same camps, nor were they from the same branches of the service, but they sat down together, and because they were Americans and it was Fourth of July, they stuck together.

One was from Texas, from the Panhandle, and one was from Brooklyn and had been a cab driver and knew the world. The third was from California, and the fourth was a coal miner's son from Kentucky. They had American names like Shorty and Butch and Ed and Whitey, and none of them had ever been in London before.

Whitey from Texas said: "Care to take a walk?" And without answering the three stood up and the group went out into the streets and walked through the streets of London, through the narrow streets that seemed to go in any direction. They walked through Trafalgar Square and looked up at the statue of Nelson. Ed from California said: "I read about it in high school history, but I forgot what it said. The guy beat the pants off the French in one war. It had a lot of wars. Hard to keep track of in high school history."

The Grass Smells Good. They got into Piccadilly and walked slowly in the sunshine until they came to Green Park, where the green grass grew under huge plane trees. "Let's get ourselves some of the grass," the Texan said. They turned off the sidewalk and stretched out on the rich grass under the trees. The sun came through and mottled the grass with light. The Texans pulled a handful of grass, put his nose down on the ground and smelled it. "That smells mighty good," he said. "That reminds me of home."

"If I was home," Ed spoke softly, "and it was the day before the Fourth, I'd be buying the biggest damn skyrockets you ever saw. I always did get big ones, but nothing to what I'd get if I was home now."

"Coney's a nice place on the Fourth," said Shorty. "A little crowded, but pretty nice. I like a lot of people around."

"I read the paper at the Red Cross this morning," the Kentuckian began. "It don't look so good."

"Your damn right it don't look so good," Ed replied. "But there's a lot of fighting going on; calling names, can't get together — war contracts."

"Whatever happened to that steel company that was making that lousy steel?" Butch asked. No one answered him.

Fear of Inflation. "It's got me worried," the Texan said, "first thing Congress wiped out Farm Security. We used to get a loan there when we needed it. My wife's running the place. We just got a small place and I don't know if we can keep it if we have to pay bank interest. Well, sir, when I left we had $3000 in the bank. Now they come along

'Bumpy' and Bill A Great Team, Pyle Discovers

Mrs. Stevenson Is Foster Mother to Army, Husband's Right Hand Man.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NORTH AFRICA (by wireless). BILL STEVENSON, the head of the American Red Cross in Africa, has been married 17 years and has two daughters, 15 and 10. Mrs. Stevenson is just as handsome as her husband, and the two stand out in a crowd because of their smart good looks.

Mrs. Stevenson's name is Eleanor, but it is a name so long undisplayed that she probably wouldn't respond if you called her by it. Her name before her marriage was Eleanor Bumstead, and ever since she can remember she has been known as Bumpy.

The two met while Bill was at Oxford in the middle 20's. Bumpy's father had gone to England on business, and Bumpy went along. She and Bill knew of each other but had never met.

Bill says Bumpy followed him to England and asked him to marry her. Bumpy says, well, what if she did?

'Bumpy' Gets Lowdown. HERE is a sort of unspoken rule in the Red Cross against husband and wives being together, but in this case it is unthinkable that Bumpy should not be along. The two operate as a mechanism. Bumpy wears a Red Cross uniform, and in addition to a terrific amount of headquarters work she is a sort of roving delegate, cheer-upper, smoother-over and finder-out for the whole Red Cross of Africa, and half the Army, too. She travels a lot, and everywhere she goes she lends her pretty tales of woe, turns her pretty smile on generals and privates without distinction, and gives her strong shoulder to be wept upon by all and sundry.

Bill calls her "the G. I. girl friend."

"I have to be super-nice to everybody," Bill says with a laugh, "because I never know whom I'm talking to. Soldiers come barging into my office and sit and talk to the hour. I've got to work to do but I don't dare hurry them off, for it's probably Bumpy's latest boy friend. It's always either generals or privates with Bumpy. Nobody in between stands a chance."

Bumpy and Bill have a way with them of making everybody crazy about them. Bumpy especially is a sponge that attracts the spilling of private griefs. The soldiers

'UNDERGROUND PARLIAMENT' OF FRANCE UNITES SIXTEEN MOVEMENTS FOR LIBERATION

Only Meeting Ever Held Concerted Plans to Support Invasion, Indorsed De Gaulle for Civil Government and Approved Giraud for Military Chief.

Here with the second of a series of articles telling the dramatic undercover story of Europe's native patriots and their death-defying resistance to the German Order, from Norway to the Balkans, written by Nat A. Barrows, foreign observer in London for the Chicago Daily News—Post-Dispatch Foreign Service.

By NAT A. BARROWS

LONDON, July 7.

IN all the history of France, there never was a meeting like that before. Where they came from and who they were won't be told until such men can move about freely and openly again, unafraid of Gestapo tortures, or worse, the prisons of their own France. With the greatest secrecy, they had arranged for this meeting and even more secretly they assembled all in one room. This was on May 25.

The men risking their lives there in that hideout represented the 16 underground resistance movements of France—the underground "Parliament."

In whispers, listening always for suspicious sounds outside, they discussed closer unity among the movements, talked about what they hoped to do when the Allied invasion comes and drew up a resolution for the approval of their superiors in London.

It was a great risk to assemble so many key men into one room and they had needed months of the most exacting schemes to bring it about, knowing what a blow it would be to French resistance if either the Germans or the Laval police could get their hands on such a high haul.

Once, and only once, did they allow them to come together in one room. Thereafter, they met in smaller groups to reduce their losses in event of capture.

The significance of this meeting is that all the French resistance movements are now united as never before under the overall guidance, in metropolitan France, of one experienced underground agent who has long been the most important liaison operative between the various movements and the French in London. This "master mind" will be particularly helpful in keeping unity intact because he is not attached to any given movement.

This meeting developed elastic plans for bringing the French patriots to the aid of the Allies during invasion, but all 16 representatives are realistic enough to appreciate that the reserve of French man power is decreasing hourly under the impact of forced labor deportations and tightening of restrictions upon all civilians.

Grimly, they analyzed the prospects of another six months and agreed that they will need every shred of their unity and co-ordination against intensified pressure from the Germans and Laval collaborationists which has already blotted France nearly white.

On the political side, this meeting of underground leaders—now known as the Council of French Resistance—pledged anew its support of Gen. Charles de Gaulle as their symbol of unity, and ultimate freedom. Huddled together in their darkened hideout, they tightened their inter-movement contacts to prevent duplication of sabotage whereby, for instance, agents of the Combat and the Federation Republican would not both attempt to sabotage the same bridge or warehouse and thus waste time and energy.

Then, solemnly, they drew up a resolution about Gen. de Gaulle and Giraud.

A copy of the resolution, now in London, reads in part:

"It is the will of this council that the government (of French affairs) should be given to De Gaulle, who has been the soul of resistance in the darkest days... and it is its ardent wish that Giraud should take command of the French Army. Thus would be

Interpreting the War News WHY GERMANS SAY REDS STRUCK FIRST

By VICTOR GORDON LENNOX

The Chicago Daily News—Post-Dispatch Special Cable. Copyright, 1943.

LONDON, July 7. GERMANY is giving out stories that the new outbreak of fighting on the Ore-Belgorod front is a Russian attack which the Nazis are successfully holding.

These stories are for home-front consumption, of course, but they contain a clue as to the probable scope and purpose of the present heavy scale, but local operation on the eastern front.

Why have the Germans attacked Russia now and why are they attempting to represent that this was a Russian offensive? The reasons are complex and may be compounded from these elements:

First, the Stalingrad debacle apparently still is very depressing to German morale. Reliable information shows that the Stalingrad defeat still overshadows that of Tunisia in the minds of the German people, who have been taught for most of the past 12 years to regard the Russians as their most dangerous enemy.

Then, although the German people have been told repeatedly that a defensive policy is best, the masses were becoming most anxious as summer passed without further eastern front operations, while in the west Allied bombings were getting harder and harder to bear and the southern front obviously was shaky.

Red-Nazi Peace Rumor. It was believed, too, that Japan, acting for Germany, had tried, within the last two months to procure a negotiated Russian-German peace which Stalin had spurned.

Politically, therefore, it was thought desirable to give the German people a display of military strength on the eastern front.

was undertaken to iron out a dangerous Russian salient and to spoil Russian preparations for a resumed offensive later.

Had the Nazi attack met with instantaneous success, the German high command would have exploited it to the fullest, but this does not seem to be happening. Hence, again, the German explanation that it was the Russians who attacked.

Even if Russian claims that 1200 German tanks were wiped out should be halved, it is evident that the enemy has damaged himself severely, smashing his head against a wall, well prepared during many months in which Russian reconnaissance planes have been keeping tabs on German concentrations and accumulation of stores.

All Nazi Weapons New. Confirmation that the enemy has not sufficient reserves for a sustained offensive for his entire front seems to be provided by the Nazis' own front-line reporter, Kurt Sotra, who declares "everything is brand-new, straight from our factories throughout Europe."

Meanwhile, proof that Axis leaders consider defense of the Southern front absolutely essential can be found by the recent transfer of Marshal Wolfgram von Richthofen from the Southeast front to a command in Italy, as well as in the retention of some 30 Italian divisions in the Balkans and maintenance of 1000 front-line operations in the Mediterranean area.

Berlin's announcement that Richthofen has been sent to Italy has been erroneously interpreted in some quarters, however, as showing that his "airfleet" has also been transferred. This shows a failure to understand German air force organization. An "airfleet" is a "command" like the "Eto." (European theater operations).

Actually Richthofen probably was sent to take over from Field

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Our Domestic Discard.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE average American citizen, doing his best for the war effort, cannot but look with dismay and alarm upon the situation which has been growing in the national capital during recent weeks. Farmers, straining every effort to produce the food which the United Nations must have for victory, find it hard to understand the selfish maneuvering of farm blocs and food czars.

Families with sons on the fighting fronts cannot sympathize with labor leaders who threaten sabotage in fights for personal power. Men and women working in war plants or civilian industries, buying bonds, paying taxes, hoeing Victory gardens, performing the duties of civilian defense—these people know that the bickering of politicians and the squabbling of bureau heads is bound to be paid for in the blood of American fighting men. That price is too high, but what is to be done about it?

This situation in domestic affairs seems to parallel, in many of its implications, the one which took form immediately after the First World War, which was the first long step America made on the road to the present war. It is even more dangerous, since it has come into being before the war has been won.

It is a situation in which everyone involved in some justification, blame somebody else. Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats protest that Congress is merely reasserting itself against the forces of administration bureaucracy. New Dealers state, with equal justice, that attacks are made on administration measures without regard to the effect of these attacks upon the war effort. Bureau heads complain, not without cause, of divided responsibility and lack of final authority. Labor leaders point to high corporation profits and living costs which penalize workers.

All these claims and complaints contain truth, and all of them fail to face one supreme fact. America today is fighting total war, against adversaries who have not hesitated to throw into their gamble for world supremacy every resource which they possess. We are fighting under the leadership of an administration which was elected by the clear majority of the American people. Under this leadership we must win the war, and at what final cost is largely up to us to determine.

Politics could lose the war, whether played by Democrats, New Dealers or Republicans. Election is the enemy of the American people. Washington seems to have lost sight of this all-important fact, that if we lose the war there will be no New Deal left to beat or any Republican party, either.

LEONARD HALL.

A Criticism of Political Expediency.

Y OUR editorial, "At His Worst," is excellent. As you so well point out, the confusion which now prevails in Washington arises from the President's reluctance to discharge incompetent or unfit appointees and his equal refusal to invest his appointees with the power necessary for the performance of their assignments.

The obvious reason for his reluctance to discharge incompetents is the political repercussions that might result from such action. The obvious reason for his refusal to invest others with power is his desire to retain all power in his own hands. Thus political expediency and appetite for power are placed before the welfare of the nation. They are given a sort of priority. Sober-minded citizens who still believe in the validity of the multiplication table are deeply perturbed.

For a Just Peace.

TO THE Editor of the Post-Dispatch: I THOUGHT Dorothy Thompson's recent column, "A Swedish Writer On the Coming Peace," was most enlightening. She seems to have sensed the feeling of most true Americans. We want justice, not revenge, and to hate the evil in men and not the race itself.

Miss Thompson has the right slant on this war when she points out we do not favor the return of royalists to power in Europe. It has been quoted that those in power in Britain favor the return of monarchies in Spain, Greece and Italy. If this is true, we in the United States are fighting for another cause. We wish a United States of Europe with a free representative of the people at the head of each state. A few people may argue this is impossible as the people on the whole have not attained the educational status of ruling themselves. Our protective counsel is needed.

As Miss Thompson stated, a new history book, based on truth and without prejudice, needs to be written by a group of just historians. This history, taught to the youth everywhere, will have a great influence in reorganizing the countries of Europe.

We will not attain our objective at the first peal of the victory bell. The new birth of democracy will take time, but it will be worth the effort in the regained love and respect of our fellow men.

MRS. W. J. CREAMER, Jerseyville, Ill.

TWO ILL-ADVISED PROPOSALS.

The United Automobile Workers, CIO, make no contribution to the war effort with certain sections of their recently announced postwar program. This program, the fruit of a recent meeting of the union's international executive board, calls for the postwar ownership by Government or municipalities of monopolistic industries and industries strategically necessary to the national safety. If the union believes that such industries should no longer be privately owned, the union has a right to that opinion. But we distinctly protest against the auto workers in coming forth with that opinion at this time.

These are not the days to propose sweeping economic changes. These are the days for holding close to the status quo on the economic front. These are the days when our national, internal situation calls for unity, and still more unity, from all groups and all classes in the economic scale. For the auto workers to make this proposal at this time is of a piece with an industrialist who would step forth with a postwar platform leading to the liquidation of the trade union movement.

Another plank in the union's postwar platform also is of dubious character, at this time or at any other. The union asks for the destruction of the "war production" industries of the Axis nations.

The auto workers of all workers should know that almost any great, basic industry today is one which may be converted to war use. Certainly this demand will give little hope to workers of the Axis nations who at this very time may be looking askance at what Fascism has imposed upon them. And a demand which might lead to the economic and, therefore, social impoverishment of the Axis nations in the years to come is hardly in line with the bright new world of lasting peace which is possible in the not too distant tomorrow.

The automobile union is one of the nation's most powerful groups. In the past, with some notable exceptions, it has been an organization which has proceeded on a sane basis. For this union suddenly to propose a plan to alter the national economy in a day when it is the job of management and labor to work together at the same bench but with one common purpose in mind—the winning of the war—is no contribution to American unity.

Such proposals as the British Beveridge plan and the recommendations made by President Roosevelt's planning council are not without the boundaries of today's economic pattern. They merely add to it, approach past problems more scientifically and with greater realism. Such ideas as these, such proposals as international co-operation with the United States taking a leading part, are eminently fitting and proper for postwar planning.

But let both labor and capital hold off on demands for more profound changes until the war is won. Labor will miss nothing by so doing, for no intelligent radical—and we do not by any means imply that the executive board of the auto workers is composed of radicals—expects to see sweeping changes in ownership in this country at the war's end. The struggle instead may be to keep the nation as liberal as it is today.

TWO PUBLIC-SPRITED MEN.

Gov. Donnell has made an excellent appointment in his choice of Edward K. Love of St. Louis to be a Republican member of the Missouri Conservation Commission. Mr. Love succeeds Albert P. Greensfelder, one of the most valuable of Missouri's citizens. Mr. Greensfelder is largely responsible for Washington State Park, Rockwood Reservation at Glencoe, du Pont Reservation at Winfield, the beautiful Shaw Gardenway and the new road from Hannibal to Kansas City. Working quietly and unobtrusively, seeking no personal glorification, he richly deserves a salute as he relinquishes his post on the Conservation Commission.

Mr. Love is a conservationist in the fullest sense of the term. He not only believes personally in care of wildlife and natural resources, but appreciates the urgency of having conservation become a basic part of life in the United States. It was this which motivated him five years ago when he established the Edward K. Love Wildlife Conservation Foundation, with a gift of $100,000, for scholarships, prizes and research projects in conservation.

Before that, he was one of the leaders in the movement to lift fish and game propagation and protection out of the hands of the old political game-warden system. Missouri today has its conservation amendment and non-political, scientific administration of seasons and regulations because of such men as Edward K. Love.

The new member should, and we believe he will, distinguish the commission.

THE ATTACKS ON SLATTERY OF THE REA.

Developments in the attack on Administrator Harry Slattery of the Rural Electrification Administration by officers of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association lead plainly to the conclusion that some of the co-ops resent the close supervision of the REA.

It is true that every one of the 800 farmers' co-operative power systems is an independent business enterprise, owned and managed by its members. It is also true that public funds gathered from the pockets of the taxpayers throughout the United States have made it possible for these co-operatives to exist on a basis that provides electricity at low rates to more than a million farmers.

Under a very generous act of Congress, public funds are lent to the co-operatives for the construction of power distributing systems and generating plants, and even for the wiring of buildings. The co-operatives are allowed 25 years in which to repay the loans and the interest rate is only 2.4 per cent. REA at its own expense has provided research, engineering services and supervision resulting in substantial reduction in the cost of building and operating the rural systems.

As a matter of sound public financing, Congress placed safeguards around the loans to the co-ops and charged the Administrator with the responsibility for properly securing those loans, which the taxpayers have a right to expect shall be repaid in full. It follows, then, that under the loan contracts the earnings of the co-ops in excess of operating expenses are in a sense mortgaged as security for the debt of the co-ops, principal and interest, to the people of the United States.

When Administrator Slattery took a stand against a plan to draw on these funds for capital for two new insurance companies projected by the officers of the national association of the co-ops, he incurred the wrath of those officers.

Now the news comes from Washington that the promoters have abandoned their plan for financing insurance companies, and Slattery is vindicated on this point. It appears, however, that the officers of the association are continuing their campaign against the Administrator on other complaints which boil down to a demand for more "independence" from REA supervision.

Harry Slattery was right in the firm stand he took against the use of co-op funds for a venture into the insurance business. He has administered REA for four years strictly in accord with the non-political clause written into the act by Congress. Yet the very men who should be most interested in preserving the non-political character of REA are trying to use political pressure to destroy Slattery. Let them beware lest they bring down their own house.

RADIO CENSORSHIP OF A MEDICAL FACT.

Two issues are involved in the episode at Radio Station WTIC in Hartford, Conn., in which the program manager canceled the Sunday night broadcast of the weekly hour, "Yale Interprets the News."

The first issue is freedom of expression. The scheduled program was a discussion of race relations by Prof. Maurice R. Davis, Yale sociologist with an international reputation. Dr. Davis submitted his script to the radio station, whose managers objected to one sentence. When the sociologist refused to delete the sentence, the program was canceled. Here is the passage in controversy:

Perhaps no single incident has done more damage to Negro morale than the gratuitous insult to the race by the American Red Cross in first refusing to accept the blood of Negro donors and then in segregating it, for no scientific reason whatsoever.

The banned sentence raises the second issue, namely, the validity of the policy which distinguishes among racial groups in the collection of blood plasma for war uses. Medical science is the authority for assurance that the dried plasma is the same for all peoples, that no characteristics of any kind could possibly be transmitted through its use in transfusions. Opposition to a universal blood bank, therefore, is based on ignorance or prejudice.

In any event, censorship had its usual result. The station managers, when they ruled Dr. Davis off the radio, enlarged his audience many times. The sentence which he could not speak over a small radio outlet in Hartford, Conn., has now been carried on the wires of the Associated Press and printed on the front pages of many newspapers and commented on widely. Probably 1000 people know about it now for every one who would have heard it on the radio. Thus, the censorship contributes to public education, and is necessarily self-defeating.

A SETBACK FOR LICHTENSTEIN.

A display of good common sense was staged last night by the Republican City Central Committee when it refused to accept the candidate for treasurer favored by David B. Lichtenstein, chief lobbyist for the small-loan interests, and instead elected his opponent, by a vote of 29 to 15.

The Republicans did permit Lichtenstein to horn in on the making of their "blue ribbon slate" for the Legislature last summer, and the results were bad for the Legislature, the State and the party. The defeat of Walter C. Harris, the Lichtenstein favorite for the key post of treasurer in the local party organization, can thus be interpreted only as a distinct rebuff to the small-loan man's ambitions for political power. In fact, Harris attributed his defeat to the linking of his name with that of Lichtenstein. It is worth noting that the loan lobbyist is at the moment so discredited that his support means defeat and not victory for his candidate.

It would be interesting to know just what Lichtenstein is driving at by his increasing maneuvers in Republican politics. Does he plan to attempt capture of the party for his own special purposes? Is he dreaming of building a machine that will enable him to dominate the local Republican scene? It is reassuring to note that the City Committee is aware of the Lichtenstein drive, is on guard and wants none of his dictation. However, he is a shrewd politician and a resourceful backstage operator. Despite this setback, he will still be watchful.

JOLTS FOR THE SILVERITES.

The House of Representatives has passed the Green bill to release Government-owned silver for war uses and sent it to the White House. Considering the long fight of the silver states Senators against this measure, this is a notable occurrence, but the accompanying announcement by Representative Dingell of Michigan, chairman of a Ways and Means subcommittee, is even more noteworthy. For what Mr. Dingell reports is subcommittee approval of the Celler bill to repeal the 1934 Silver Act.

Subcommittee approval is not final passage, but it is the necessary first step toward the removal of this unsound, costly, special interest legislation. It shows the way the wind is blowing. It will give new impetus to the economists and others who have conducted a long campaign of public education.

MARKED DOWN TO $12,023,000,000.98.

The U. S. A. is worth 13 trillion dollars plus. That is the inside dope, for it comes from the Secretary of the Interior. Mr. Ickes says we have on our shelves as of the latest mid-year inventory the following merchandise:

Public and private utilities —	$3,000,000,000
Forests —	65,000,000,000
Manufacturing industries —	50,000,000,000
Petroleum —	75,000,000,000
Water power —	5,000,000,000
Public and private buildings —	140,000,000,000
Iron and other minerals —	1,600,000,000,000
Coal —	9,880,000,000,000

That, says Secretary Ickes for the edification of calamity howlers who sit and worry over a 140-billion-dollar national debt, is what the U. S. A. would be worth "raw, at a forced sale." It divides up into $89,000 a person, which is a good deal better than 40 acres and a mule, or than Kingfish Huey Long's quondam plan to give every man $5000 and crown him king.

Mr. Ickes' list, even at that, is remarkably incomplete. Just a few among the fabulously valuable stocks-in-trade of the U. S. A. he does not mention are the Mississippi River, the world's best systems of highways and communications, the faith of our fathers, the Rocky Mountains, the Great Lakes, New York harbor, 135,500,000 people, one flag and 167 years' experience in running a free country.

All in all, it adds up to quite a few trillion dollars more than the Secretary estimates. And 98 cents, just to make it look right. These particular 98 cents might cover all those who are still playing politics, strikes and business as usual when they ought to be working at a war.

Whether it's 12 trillions or 12 times 12 trillions though, "No Sale" will have to be rung up. In the first place, it's doubtful that the Indians could raise that much. In the last place, the price wouldn't be high enough. Just not any amount at all.

THE BIGGEST HEADACHE OF ALL.

—Burck in the Chicago Daily Times

A Southern View of Race Relations

The Mirror
Public Opinion

Both sides have responsibility in solving problem, Texas editor says, but chiefly the whites, since they control government; urges differences be worked out on fair basis, with equality of opportunity for Negroes; failure to reach solution will harm all America.

From the Jacksonville (Tex.) Journal.

TEXAS has been in the national spotlight because of the racial disturbances and rioting in Beaumont created by the alleged attack on a white woman by a Negro.

This situation has not helped Texas in any way, nor has it helped create better relations between the two major races in this State and the South. This situation and others of its kind very definitely retard and undo all that leaders in both races have accomplished toward a sensible solution of a situation which must be settled sooner or later.

There is no reason to place all blame for the Beaumont incident on either the white people or the Negroes. Some in both races are to blame for what has happened there as well as in other places where racial disturbances have occurred.

The obligation and responsibility to overcome the differences and to create and maintain equitable and sensible relations between the races also rest on each. The white race, however, does have greater responsibility in this phase of the situation, because it, and it alone, holds the authority of government in its control.

A Call for Common Sense.

Common sense and full recognition and consideration of the traditions and histories of both the white race and the Negro race must by all means be the basis for working out the differences between these races, so that they may have equal opportunity to enjoy the benefits of living in America.

This situation can be worked out best by the people, both whites and Negroes, of the South, because they are more familiar with conditions as they are, and because they, therefore, will be inclined strongly to consider all matters in the light of actual fact, not the theory which is preached by so many in the North who do not know what it is all about.

The time will not likely come during this or the next generation when whites and Negroes will mingle freely in public places or intermarry or have social intercourse between the races. The opposite is possible in the North, for the relations between the two races there have never been what they are and have been in the South.

Relations such as marriage and social ones between the races should be left to the decision of the individuals involved, for they, after all, are the ones to be most immediately affected.

It is the obligation of government to provide educational and health facilities of equal kind for both whites and Negroes. We do not think that government is living up to its obligation to be democratic when it discriminates against any group or any race.

All Texans May Not Agree.

We have written this with full consideration of the fact that many who read it will not agree; that many will let prejudice instead of common sense shape their opinions or imbued them more securely against approaching this matter with anything other than a big stick or a shotgun; and we can never finish reading it, and that some will accuse us of being carpetbaggers or worse.

We have written this in spite of what may come from some who will read it. We are Southerners to the core. We can point to Civil War records of our forebears with as much pride as any of the Daughters or Sons of the Confederacy—and we can carry it back to the days of the 13 little states fighting for freedom and justice for all.

We know that this is a situation which must be settled peacefully and by application of common sense or some day it will blow up in our faces to the detriment of all Americans. We know that this situation must be handled tactfully and carefully—and we know that rioting will only help to leave some of our boys "over there" when they might come home some day, when rioting delays war production so vital now to all America.

We ask simply that those who disagree with this read it again slowly and thoughtfully and with open minds after the first rush of hot emotion—which is the underlying passion of all mob action, incidentally—has passed.

Causes of Washington Quarrels

From the New York Times.

THE quarrel between Mr. Wallace and Mr. Jones is merely one more symptom of the deep-seated organizational malady in Washington.

It is merely the latest of an unending series of such disagreements—between Gen. Short and Admiral Kimmel, Mr. Hillman and Mr. Knudsen, Mr. Ickes and Mr. Henderson, Mr. Eberstadt and Mr. Wilson, Mr. Patterson and Mr. Jeffers, Mr. Jeffers and Elmer Davis, Mr. Byrnes and the War Labor Board, Mr. Ickes and the War Labor Board, Chester Davis and Mr. Vinson; and so on.

It is a very superficial view indeed which merely blames the individuals directly involved, and treats them like a lot of quarrelsome little boys. Where the fault has not been due to the appointment of the wrong men for key positions, it will be found to be due to one or more of the following failures on the part of the President himself:

(1) Failure to delegate sufficient power for the task ostensibly assigned; (2) failure to make clear to each official from the beginning precisely where his power and responsibility begin and end; (3) failure to prevent overlapping, duplication and conflict of authority; (4) failure to support an official fully as long as he is retained in office and keeps within his assigned power; (5) failure to discipline or remove an official when he oversteps his assigned power.

It should be evident that no mere paper reorganization will cure this organizational malady. No single executive order or directive, no matter how forceful, will cure it. These may start a cure. But they will be ineffective unless supported continuously by the President's attitude and actions.

Life of Channing Pollock,
A Veteran of the Theater

(Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

AT various times reporter, drama critic, playwright, short-story writer, novelist, world traveler, press agent, director, producer, editor and lecturer, Channing Pollock, at the age of 63 years, has come to the point of being biographer of himself. "Harvest of My Years," in 375 pages, plus index, touches on all the phases of his varied career.

From such a skilled hand as his, the autobiography is necessarily a well-written one, packed with incident and anecdote and reflecting, even with some distortion at times, the theater of the earlier part of the century, the decade of the '20s and today. If the author should need ready identification for anyone, it is he who wrote "The Fool," "The Enemy" and "The House Beautiful," the last of which brought forth Dorothy Parker's famous capsule criticism, "The House Beautiful" is the play lousy."

Pollock was born in Washington, D. C., grew up in Omaha and Salt Lake City, and spent part of his boyhood in the Republic of Salvador, where his father was American Consul. The author says his life has been rich in friendships, from Victor Herbert to Texas Guinan, and that he has never been unhappy for one full hour, which he attributes mainly to the fact that he has had good health and has kept busy. He hopes to live to be at least 85 and promises Volume II of his autobiography in 1950, if not thwarted by the Grim Reaper.

The most marked impression of "Harvest of My Years" to a person who has not known the author, or any of his plays, is the personality revealed. Some few examples from its elements should suffice.

Pollock thinks it may be accurate that he has earned two million dollars in the theater over a period of 30 years. In nearly all of his 31 plays, he has named the heroine Anna, for his wife, and has used a phrase or two of "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," their favorite ballad, somewhere in the play.

He once said that the movies had "helped the legitimate theater by taking the morons out of our audiences," and kept to that course when the resultant storm broke.

He points out, nevertheless, that the state of the theater grows progressively worse. He quit it himself because of the critics, he says, and he hints at various times that he might not be surprised if both the Will Hays office and the New York Critics' Circle have his name on a blacklist.

He deplores the "depth of ignorance in a very large part of our population," thinks that "free speech is increasingly an empty boast in America" and is "profoundly distrustful of certain philosophies and our admitted trend toward state socialism."

Some Fine Pictures of China.

AS a tribute to our Oriental ally's sixth anniversary of war, Henry Holt & Co., today publishes "China," a beautiful book of 84 photographs, with captions and text by Kwok Ying Fung, a young Chinese-American. The pictures are chosen to present both ancient and modern China, and to show the patient, indomitable character of its people. Their faith in the future is exemplified by the fact, the author notes, that in the Chinese language the word "tomorrow" is expressed by two characters which mean "bright day."

TODAY and TOMORROW

By Walter Lippmann

THE INTIMATE TRUTH.

A LEARNED friend with whom I was discussing the political mish-mash in Washington has sent me some remarks made by the Duke of Wellington about Napoleon Bonaparte's "most egregious faults of generalship and conduct" in his disastrous Russian campaign of 1812. They are recorded in the papers of John Wilson Croker, who was Secretary to the Admiralty from 1809 to 1830.

Time was everything, said Wellington, and Napoleon lost seven weeks; he was often absent when he ought and might have been present; if he had been present, he would have put an end to a dispute between his generals and probably have had a decided success.

"His conduct . . . is not easily accounted for. I believe he was in more awe of his marshals than was generally supposed—he acted as if he were not sure of their obedience; for instance, he would order one of them to take another under his command, but he never ventured to tell the other to obey him. . . . Of course, the two fellows got into a quarrel directly."

It is not always a comfort to read history. For there is no record of anyone's having been able to persuade Napoleon to accept the kind of advice which he most needed.

'Frozen Muddle.'

YET the trouble in Washington today cannot be overcome except by yielding to the exceedingly difficult and very unwelcome plea for a change of heart and of mind by the Chief Executive. Is it not obvious that something has to change if the country is to be governed? The tenure of the President is fixed. The tenure of Congress is fixed. Neither can override the other. The President cannot govern without Congress. The country cannot be governed without the President. Yet somewhere, somehow, in the rigidity of our constitutional system, there must be found enough flexibility of change to melt this frozen muddle.

No doubt the President feels that the place for a change is in his opponents in Congress. But to say this is to beg the question. When a man has the wartime powers of the President of the United States, he has the power, and therefore the responsibility, for acting so that the normal opposition does not become unmanageable. No one can honestly admire the whole record of this Congress, and all the tests of public opinion show that the majority of our people do not admire it. But the record shows also a clear line of demarcation in the actions of Congress: on the one side of the line, unhesitating and unanimous support of the fighting services, and on the other, an angry, and at times a reckless and hysterical, opposition in those fields which, though they are vitally related to the war, are regarded as within the range of domestic politics.

Standing Pat No Answer.

IF THE President and his advisers are not trying to fool themselves, they must admit to themselves that the congressional opposition, however much they may deplore it, is striking where his own conduct is most vulnerable. That the attack is reckless or destructive does not alter the fact that he has opened himself to the attack. Nor does it permit him to forget that he has had the power and can at any moment recover the power to repel the attack by cutting the ground from under the complaints of the opposition.

But he can never do this by stubbornly standing pat on his appointments, his policies, and his prejudices. When a President, whose tenure is fixed, is in a deadlock with a Congress that he cannot dominate, he can carry on the government only if he himself is not stubbornly inflexible. He must change his vulnerable measures. He must change his vulnerable men. But first he must change his own habits of mind. He must first divest himself of the idea that he can somehow prove he was always right, instead of cutting his losses and doing what is right. The desire to be proved right is the cause of the tragic mismanagement of our relations with France, and it is the cause of the bitterness and the bickering in Washington today.

'Bitter Medicine.'

YET the remedy really is not too hard. What is hard is the thought that the medicine is going to be bitter. Yet if the medicine is swallowed, the bitter taste would be momentary and the good effects lasting.

It is bitter medicine for Roosevelt to admit that he has made a mistake. It is an even bitterer medicine for him to part with men, some of whom he likes, some of whom he rather fears because of their vested political power. But this is a time when his countrymen are taking the bitter medicine of hardship, and of separation, and of wounds and of death. They would be comforted, they would be reassured, they would feel again that affection which they need to give to the head of the state, if only they could be shown lucidity and resolution, let the chips fall where they may, in the high places where they must look for an example.

The saying publicly of such things as these, though those who know Washington say them privately, as we know, to make it still harder to have them done. Men hate to change their minds. They have even more to appear to have been forced to change them. Yet things cannot go on as they are now going on in Washington. The bitter persuasion just does not produce the necessary changes.

There must be a decided change. We cannot sustain successfully the burden of a long and costly conflict unless our greatest institutions of government are rejuvenated and renovated and restored.

NEW AIR LINES TO IMPROVE ST. LOUIS SERVICE SOUGHT

Establishment of a new air line from St. Louis to Detroit and Cleveland via Springfield, Ill., Indianapolis, Anderson, Muncie and Fort Wayne, Ind., and Toledo, O., was proposed by American Airlines, Inc., in a group of applications filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington, it was announced.

The new line would provide direct through service between St. Louis and Toledo, Detroit, Cleveland and other cities to the east for the first time.

American Airlines applied for permission to extend its present St. Louis-Chicago line to Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., which would give St. Louisans through one-plane service to Milwaukee for the first time.

The company also sought the right to operate directly from Oklahoma City, Ok., to El Paso, Tex., which would shorten the present American Airlines route from St. Louis to Los Angeles, and requested permission to make Joplin, Mo., a stop on its Chicago-Dallas line via St. Louis.

OVERLAND VOTES TO CUT OUT RITENOUR SCHOOL DISTRICT

The Ritenour School District, which was incorporated in the city limits of Overland last year, was voted out of the city and back to its original status yesterday in a special poll of the enlarged city. The vote was 3496 to 288.

With the exclusion of the school district from the city, seven aldermen were eliminated from office, leaving only three. Mrs. Evelyn Marshall, city clerk, said a meeting of the remaining aldermen would be held tonight to consider an ordinance to authorize an election to fill out the deleted board. Residents of Ritenour, who protested they had no voice in the election which brought their community into the city of Overland, complained that being a part of the city increased their taxation.

In the first World War he was Colonel of the 34th Infantry. He also was a veteran of the Spanish-American and Boer wars, and was decorated by Queen Victoria during the Boer war.

RUDOLPH FORSTER DIES; AID AT WHITE HOUSE

Executive Clerk Had Served Since Administration of McKinley.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP).—Rudolph Forster, long-time executive clerk at the White House and an assistant to many Presidents, was found dead in bed today at his apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel. A physician said Forster, 70 years old, apparently suffered a heart attack in his sleep.

Mr. Forster was a Government stenographer when he was called to the White House in President William McKinley's administration "to help out for a few days." That was March 5, 1897, and those "few days" stretched out for 46 years.

President Roosevelt issued this statement: "For the work which made him a tower of strength in our White House organization Rudolph Forster had unique gifts. "His was an orderly and well-disciplined mind which made him intolerant of poor draftsmanship and alert in the detection of errors in the sheaves of public papers which it was his duty to scrutinize before they were passed on for approval by the executive. He was unobtrusive, absolutely self-effacing, and entirely unself-conscious. "A deep sense of duty underlay everything which he did, and the work of eight successive Presidents was safe in his keeping. The soul of courtesy in his dealings with all sorts and conditions of men, happily also he had a gift of humor which could lighten even the dulllest of days. His passing is an irreparable loss to the White House, to the nation, and to his generation.

"My friendship with him went back to the administration of Theodore Roosevelt. It was continued even more closely during the Wilson administration, and when I returned to Washington on March 4, 1913, it was a great help and a happy thing to find an old and true friend still at the head of the White House offices.

"Rudolph Forster will live in the grateful and affectionate memory of all who knew him during his long and faithful tenure of office." Exempted From Retirement.

When Mr. Forster reached 70 last October, Roosevelt issued an executive order exempting him from retirement for age, at the time extending the exemption to Forster's veteran associate, Maurice C. Latta, 73. A note then said: "This is permanent. I don't want either of you to leave me as long as I'm here. F. D. R."

Presidential Press Secretary Stephen Early commented that Mr. Forster was really the permanent secretary of the President by reason of his long service and familiarity with executive affairs.

MAHARAJAH GETS AMERICAN WIFE AFTER A BUSY DAY

RENO, Nev., July 7 (AP).—The 1,325,089 people of Indore have a new American Maharani—an attractive, 29-year-old brunette.

It took two divorces and a marriage—all in a day—to make Mrs. Euphemia Watt Crane the wife of the Maharajah who rules the Central India State.

The 33-year-old Maharajah—Y. R. Holkar—is his name—was married to Mrs. Crane last night after each obtained a divorce. It was his third marriage.

He was divorced yesterday morning from his Maharani of five years, the former Marguerite Lawler Branyen of Fargo, N. D., once a nurse for his daughter.

The new Maharani was divorced shortly before noon from Frank Arthur Crane, said to be an employee of an American aviation company in India.

FUNERAL TOMORROW FOR FRANK A. STIERS

St. Louisan, National Figure in Construction Business, Was Inventor of Note.

Funeral services for Frank A. Stiers, a nationally known figure in the construction business who died of heart disease Monday will take place at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at his residence, 5533 Lindell boulevard. He was president of the Stiers Brothers Construction Co. and also of the Stiers Realty Co. He was 73 years old.

Since 1930, he had devoted most of his time to the realty company, leaving the construction company's affairs largely in the hands of his sons, Lewis J. and Harold C.

Mr. Stiers held basic patents for the asphalt strip road and gained fame for his development of tile sewer pipe. His company constructed a number of St. Louis streets and viaducts. He was employed in the widening of Broadway, Vandeventer avenue, Market street and Washington avenue.

In 1925 the Engineering Convention held in Germany gave him honorable mention for his work in building the Fourteenth street viaduct, where piers had to be sunk through quicksand more than 100 feet deep.

Mr. Stiers' company installed Rocky Branch sewer, a system covering most of Northwest St. Louis. He designed and built waterworks for cities in virtually every state. Both the Blisell Point and Baden reservoirs here were rebuilt by him in 1930.

He developed valves and sprays for street sprinkling and inaugurated the use of the concrete mixer operating under its own power.

Coming to St. Louis from Ulrichville, O., when 19 years old, he at once organized his own construction company. His business eventually grew to a concern employing more than 4000. Its latest project is a complicated engineering feat in which the Colorado River is being diverted 14 miles through a tunnel from Grand Lake to Estes Park, Colo.

In addition to the construction and realty companies, Mr. Stiers was interested in the Modern Sand & Gravel Co., Glencoe, and the Contractors' Material Co., 4440 Ryler avenue.

Surviving, in addition to the two sons, are two daughters, Mrs. Elva Hufford and Mrs. Mildred Broder.

YOUTH BODY ASKS LEADERS TO CLARIFY RACIAL TENSIONS

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis., July 7 (AP).—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada have been asked by the Christian Youth Council of North America to "speak out clearly in the near future concerning racial tensions which are today threatening the very values we seek to preserve."

At biennial meeting which closed Monday 190 representatives from 20 Protestant denominations, 33 State Church Councils and eight other co-operating agencies approved a telegram to the two Government heads containing the request.

"We feel," the message stated, "that the Christian recognition of the dignity of all men regardless of race, creed or class is now not only desirable but imperative, if we are to preserve the foundations of democratic society and the hope of lasting peace."

Browns Shine in Field to Check Yankees in the Second Inning

Etten Belts a Homer, Johnson Bats in Run Off Potter's Delivery

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, July 7.—Three straight singles in the second inning gave the Browns a run-along, the Browns in the fourth and concluding game of their series here this afternoon, and the Yankees added another tally in the third when Nick Etten hit his sixth home run of the season to the pavilion roof.

Dickey started the second with a hit and Gordon bunted for a sacrifice but beat it out for a single, Dickey stopping at second. The Yankee catcher then retired in favor of Sears, who ran for him, and Sears scored on Johnson's single to left, Gordon going to third.

Stainback hit to Cliff and Gordon was run down between third and home, Cliff to Hayes to Cliff to Potter, Johnson reaching third and Stainback second. Lindell was passed intentionally to fill the bases.

Chandler hit a long foul to deep left and Laabs made a fine catch. His throw to Cliff for Stainback going to third before Johnson crossed the plate.

The run followed a scoreless first inning for the Browns, in which Chastak hit into a double play with the bases full.

It was Ladies' Day but even so, the attendance was not more than 2500.

Summers and Stewart umpired. Steve Sundra is scheduled to pitch for the Browns tomorrow afternoon in the first of a five-game series against the Boston Red Sox. The set includes a night game Friday, an afternoon contest Saturday and the usual double-header Sunday.

Stainback hit to Cliff and Gordon was caught in a run-up and retired, Cliff to Hayes to Cliff to Potter, Johnson taking third and Stainback second on the play. Lindell was intentionally passed, filling the bases. Chandler fouled to Laabs and Stainback was doubled trying for third, Laabs to Cliff. (The out on Stainback was made before Johnson had crossed the plate.) ONE RUN.

BROWNS—Sears caught for the Yankees. McQuinn grounded out to Gordon. Hayes was called out on strikes. Cliff singled to right. Gordon threw out Potter.

THIRD—YANKEES—Crosetti flied to Chastak. So did Metheny. Etten hit to the roof of the right-field pavilion for a home run, his sixth of the season. Sears was safe on Guttridge's fumble. Gordon lined to Cliff. ONE RUN.

BROWNS—Guttridge grounded out to Crosetti. Gordon threw out Zarilla. Laabs flied to Lindell.

FOURTH—YANKEES—Johnson flied to Laabs. Stainback grounded out to Stephens. Cliff threw out Lindell.

FIFTH—YANKEES—Chandler struck out. Crosetti flied to Laabs. Metheny fouled to McQuinn.

BROWNS—Cliff singled to center. Potter walked. Guttridge hit into a double play, Crosetti to Gordon to Etten. Gordon threw out Zarilla.

Garden State Race

Meet Begins Today

CAMDEN, N. J., July 7 (AP).—Prayed against, leveled against, even OPA'd against, Garden State Park opens today for 50 days of racing, and about the only other thing that could happen would be for all the horses to be drafted.

White-haired Eugene Mori, the Vineland (N. J.) banker who built the nation's newest racing grounds last spring, estimated with crossed fingers that 12,000 improvers of the breed would be at the trouble-ridden, freshly manicured park.

The horses, meanwhile, were ready to get down to serious racing. Valding Alpha, carrying weight of 115 pounds, was a likely post favorite in the $5000 Camden Handicap, against such sprinters as Cassis, 117, and mud-loving Unchallenged, 113, over the six furlongs.

WYATT ORDERED NOT TO THROW FOR TWO WEEKS

BROOKLYN, July 7 (AP).—Whitlow Wyatt, veteran Brooklyn pitcher, has been ordered to do no throwing for two weeks because of a lame right shoulder, the Dodgers announced today. Wyatt, who pitched to only one batter in his last mound start against the Reds a week ago, was examined yesterday by Dr. Michael Deddish. The ailment was diagnosed as a bursitis condition and Wyatt was advised to do no throwing and to rest his arm for two weeks.

to tarry through the late innings, for the Browns definitely were getting his range in the sixth. Then it was that Guttridge singled and took second when Lindell slipped in fielding the ball. Zarilla, evidently trying to beat out a bunt when the Yankees were looking for some straight away hitting, bumped the ball close to the plate and was credited with a sacrifice as Guttridge advanced. Laabs drove him home as he broke his bat in popping a single to Lindell's territory.

Stephens followed with a smashing single to left and with two men on base and one out Russo was obviously wavering. Two hurlers were warming up to relieve him. Then came a break. Hayes, trying to win the game with a home run, swung lustily and hit a terrific drive at Russo's feet. The pitcher dove on the ball, wheeled and started a game-saving double play, Gordon to Etten.

Hayes' drive was a hot one and Russo suffered an injury to the middle finger of his pitching hand in stopping the ball. He was unable to continue and was relieved in the next inning by Murphy, a fortunate change for the Yankees. Russo thus scored his first victory of the season. He has recently shown signs of recovering his 1941 form after having had a lot of trouble with his arm.

Before that uprising, the Browns held the lead. Zarilla's swinging bunt and Chet Laabs home run gave St. Louis two runs in the first inning. Laabs now has hit a home run a five of the Browns' last six games and he has a total of 10 for the season.

The Yanks cut that advantage in half in the second when Dickey doubled and Johnson singled and so it was until the bad fifth.

Later Guttridge and Laabs combined for a run in the sixth and another in the eighth, only to reduce the Yanks' lead to a point where the Browns were forced to accept their nineteenth one-run defeat of the season.

Good Break for New York. The result might have been different if Russo had been permitted

Mort Cooper to Seek His Eleventh Victory in Night Game With Phils

Gumbert and Krist Have Accounted for Seven of Cardinals' 11 Triumphs on Road Campaign.

By J. Roy Stockton Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—This is another salute to the "Hall Room Boys," Handsome Harry Gumbert and almost as handsome Howard Krist. The Cardinals have won 11 games and lost five on the trip and the roommates, Howard and Harry, have accounted for seven of the 11 victories.

Gumbert turned in his best performance of the season in the third game of the series with the Phils to win, 4-0 and increase the Birds' lead over Brooklyn to four games. He was throwing a curve that dipped so effectively that all the Phils could do all afternoon was to beat the ball into the dirt, which gave the Redbird infielders a pleasant and easy afternoon. The outfield just loafed around, only four flies being hit to the World Champions' secondary defense.

There were only three Philadelphia hits, all singles, and only one runner advanced beyond first base, that was when a wide throw by Kurovski put Livingston on base in the third, to advance to second on Murtaugh's single.

It was the fourth straight victory for Handsome Harry and his sixth of the season. He started the trip by beating the Reds on seven hits, 5 to 1, followed with a five-hit victory over the Giants, to tune up for his first shutout of the year.

He might have fared better but in his game at Chicago, after three hitless innings, rain delayed the game for an hour and Gumbert cooled off. But the other half of the room took care of that game and after Harry was knocked out in the fourth, Krist rushed to his roomie's relief and pitched 5-2 scoreless innings to receive credit when the Redbirds came from behind.

Krist also started on the right foot in Cincinnati, the Redbirds first port of call on the journey, beating the Reds on five hits, 6 to 2. He picked up two victories

Musial, who looks very much like the league's best hitter of 1943, bolstered his batting average with a double, single and his lucky triple, in five times at bat.

Ray Sanders is nursing a slight cold and Johnny Hopp played first base until the doubleheader because of a slight sprain suffered in the Brooklyn series.

One of the singles off Gumbert was a grounder past the infield, so only six balls really were hit in the air to the outfield, three of them in the last two innings. The outfield didn't have a fielding chance until Kraus flied to Walker, just beyond the infield, in the fifth.

After tonight's game the Cards will stay here, departing for Boston tomorrow noon. After the Boston series the Redbirds will play exhibition games at Providence and Hartford during the All-Star game interim, before opening a series with the Pirates.

George Munger's Second Child. Mrs. George Munger, wife of the Cardinal pitcher, was receiving congratulations today on the birth of a baby girl. It is the second child for the Mungers, another daughter being two years old.

Morton Cooper, who registered his tenth triumph of the season against the Dodgers, to start the Cardinals on their victorious drive at Ebbets Field, will go after No. 11 under the floodlights tonight when he faces the Phils in the fourth and final game of the series. Newt Kimball will be Mort's opponent.

Coast Ace Purchased By Red Sox

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7 (AP)—George Metkovich, sensational young outfielder of the San Francisco Seals Baseball Club, was sold yesterday to the Boston Red Sox for immediate delivery.

The purchase price was not announced but was said to be "substantial." The Red Sox tossed in Dee Miles, outfielder formerly with the Athletics.

Metkovich, left handed hitter and thrower, was purchased from the Boston Braves this spring for $5000 and now will wear the uniform of the rival American League club in that town.

The Braves signed Metkovich in 1940 and farmed him to Evansville of the Three Eye League for three years.

Metkovich, 23 years old and married, is classified A-1 in the draft but may not be called before the baseball season ends.

The New York Yankees, New York Giants, Chicago White Sox, Cincinnati and Brooklyn were interested in Metkovich. He departed last night via Los Angeles and will join the Red Sox in St. Louis.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Helen Stephens Now Truck Driver.

HELLEN STEPHENS—remember her? . . . The fastest woman runner in the world and member of the U. S. women's Olympic team. . . Well, she has joined another U. S. team—Uncle Sam's defense workers.

There was little or no competition in this field. . . And her great prowess never was developed to its utmost.

Had she continued as an amateur she might have established new world records at every standard distance. . . She also would, no doubt, have broken several marks in field events, in which she had just begun to attract attention at the time of her retirement. . . She had the makings of the greatest all-around woman athlete of all time.

Helen's most vivid remembrance of the Olympics centers around the women's relay race in which she ran the anchor position for the American team.

The third girl on the American team lost many yards, a heavy handicap for Helen as the final lap began. . . But the German anchor girl, Ilse Doerflinger, dropped the baton and was so disheartened when she missed the first grab to recover it that she quit cold and did not even run. . . She was crying as Helen Stephens ran away from the field to win easily.

It was a great regret to this writer, who saw the race, that the event did not finish on its merits. . . Helen would really have shown the world some speed, that day, had she had to make up all that ground against Germany's best.

Tried Many Stunts Since the Olympics.

HELLEN, since her adventure in Berlin in 1936, has tried many vocations. . . She worked for the Curlee company and played basketball. . . She toured the country as head of a women's basketball team exploited by Johnny Connors, Springfield (Ill.) sportsman.

She joined the House of David guild and did athletic and speed stunts during their bewhiskered baseball exhibitions. . . She even pitched an inning or two, now and then, just to show her versatility.

As a truck driver she enters a new field. . . Tall, long and strong of limb, with masculine stride, she was an amazing runner. . . On one occasion following her selection for the Olympic team, they held a "Helen Stephens day" in her honor at William Woods College, Fulton, Mo.

A feature of that occasion was an exhibition race in which she outstripped three fast high school athletes. . . At her best she is reputed to have run the 100 meters in 11.1, but her best official time was made at Berlin in 1936 when she ran the distance in 11.5. She bettered that in time trials as a professional.

At that her Olympic time is better than was recorded in one or more of the men's Olympic century-meter dashes. . . At one time, after Jesse Owens had turned professional, there was talk of matching her with the world's fastest human to see just how good she was. . . But the race did not take place.

Fast as she was, Owens at his best was more than a second slower, according to his record. . . This writer saw him step 100 meters in the Olympic Games at Berlin in 1936.

That Stance of Junior Stephens.

JUNIOR STEPHENS is the year's baseball standout. . . That goes both at bat and in the field. . . He's a real spark plug. . . Uncle Sam probably had the Browns from mediocrity by returning him and McQuinn.

But watching Stephens at bat, you wonder. . . That stance! . . . His Colossus of Rhodes pose is the marvel of all who watch him bat. . . They wonder how he can hit and recover. . . This writer can't recall a batter, modern or ancient, who, leg length considered, planted his feet as far apart in the batter's box.

But he manages to get power into those cracks, as his batting average and home run total reveal. . . Junior's pose while waiting for the pitch is against all old-time batting technique. . . Many of the ancients hardly separated their feet. . . Jess Burckett stood at the plate with his heels almost touching. . . In this position he could step into the ball and "get his body into the swing."

There was one exception. . . Like Burckett he was a Brownie. . . That was George Stone. . . George batted with a spread stance, although not an extreme one. . . And his style led him to the batting championship. . . Maybe Stephens will do likewise and justify that half-split.

Tom Draper, former Metropolitan golf champion and one of the leading amateur linksmen of the district, was sworn in as an ensign in the Naval Reserve this morning. He was captain of the Washington University golf team from 1933 to 1936 and won the district amateur championship in 1935. Married and the father of a daughter of nine months, he resides at 1349 McCutcheon road, Richmond Heights. He has been employed recently as a chemical engineer and will be sent to a Radar school for training.

think she is wonderful. She is always getting herself in a mess by going to bat for somebody she thinks is being mistreated. Like, Bill, she is in work up to her ears and has no axes to grind. To everybody who knows them, Stevenson is Bill and Mrs. Stevenson is Bumpy, but to each other they exchange the latter for the slightly more intimate Bump and Billy.

The Stevensons have an Oldsmobile sedan for their own use over here. They live in a small but nice apartment on a hilly street. They have no servants, and seldom eat at home. It's easier and cheaper to eat at the Red Cross mess downtown.

Both are blessed with indifference to social-climbing. They have entree, as a matter of course, to high circles, but they are the kind who don't need to be seen with the right people. They dine with Lieut. Gen. Spaatz, for instance, not because he's a general but because they like him and have business to talk over with him. They have no purely social life whatever. They can skip that for the duration.

The Stevensons have been overseas more than a year now. They were in England together, and Bumpy followed Bill down here. Bill had a few days when he heard Bumpy's boat had been sunk, but it turned out she was on a different boat.

Bumpy has not been back to the States at all, but Bill took a flying trip home this spring to thresh out some details at Washington headquarters. He did his business, saw their two children, stayed a total of three weeks, and was glad to get back over here.

Like Father, Like Daughter.

BUMPY'S presence in a theater of war with her husband is a strange repetition of history. The whole thing parallels the experience of her own parents. In the last war her father was on the faculty at Yale and frequently went to England to give special lectures at Cambridge. He was there when we entered the war in 1917 and was immediately appointed scientific attache of the American Embassy in London. So Mrs. Bumstead left her children with their grandmother and went to England to be with him.

Today Bumpy's daughters are left in the hands of their grandmother while mama works overseas. Bumpy says she remembers when her mother went away to war and how lonely and horrible she felt, yet what a thrill it was to show off before the other kids in a sort of stupor about having your mother overseas. And when Bumpy left for England in the spring of 1942 one of her little girls said as she kissed her goodbye:

"Mummy, we'll be awfully lonesome, but we're awfully proud too." Meaning, mainly, as Bumpy says, that they can go around bragging about it.

WAR OUTPUT IN MAY FAILED TO EXCEED APRIL

best previous month. Marked progress was reported in delivery of destroyer-escort vessels.

Munitions now are being turned out at an annual rate of 60 billion dollars, and Nelson said the total for 1943 would run beyond 65 billion.

Complacency Assailed.

Under Secretary of War Patterson warned of a need of greater war output in a press conference June 19, blaming both management and labor for "overconfidence and complacency." He said production for the Army ground forces, scheduled to go up 2 per cent, actually had dropped 3½ per cent.

WFB spokesman at that time said the falling off appeared to be largely in equipment in which there had been intentional cut-backs, and said other production increases probably would bring an over-all rise.

Nelson disclosed that during the rest of this year it would be necessary to draw on accumulated supplies of steel, copper and aluminum to meet production schedules, as the output of these materials would be insufficient to meet the goals.

"Increases in munitions production during the rest of the year must continue at the average rate achieved so far in 1943 to meet the year's requirements," he said.

"A slackening of the pace, such as occurred in May, is therefore a very serious matter, since it places upon the remaining months of the year additional strains in a period when production difficulties will multiply because the industrial machine is operating so close to capacity."

FRENCH UNITE 16 MOVEMENTS FOR LIBERATION

realized, technically and morally, the unity of all French fighting forces—the indispensable instrument of liberation and resurrection of our country."

French resistance movements began to work in closer unity more than a year ago and their out-and-out policy of co-operation took full shape for fighting itself. The resistance movement of the French Communists pledged their support to De Gaulle.

They have a difficult role in the days ahead. The Germans are determined to spare no pain or suffering to crush underground adherents and in France they are getting the fullest co-operation from their puppet, Laval. The bitterness of French patriots against their pro-German countrymen is not the least of the worries for those trying to find order out of chaos. It is a problem calling for the greatest study of guidance if France is to be spared postwar disruption.

and want to wipe out price ceilings. Do you know what that means? If prices double, and by God they will, if there's no ceiling, my wife's got $1500, and if they double again she's got $750, and pretty soon she's got nothing. I tell you it's got me worried."

The Brooklyn hacky said: "It's all this yapping back and forth. Congressmen calling names, Government calling names, all fighting to get ahead, or to get their folks ahead. We're supposed to be over here defending something. Is that what it is?"

Butch said: "I see the British are trying to work out a way so soldiers can vote. If we could vote, why that's near 10 million of us. That would make some noise, I bet."

"You've got a vote if you want to use it," Ed said.

"The hell I have, since when?"

'Very Simple' to Vote.

"It's all right in the law. They don't talk much about it, but you can vote. It's very simple. All you've got to do is to go to your captain, you tell him you want to vote. Then he gives you a little paper, you sign it and he signs it, and you send it to your state. Then in three or four months you get back a ballot and an oath. Then you go to your captain again, you make out your ballot, and he signs it, you take an oath, and he signs it, and you sign it, and you send that off, and you've voted."

"The hell I have. How many men in the field going to do that and when? How many people are going to associate with captains that much? How the captains going to keep their sweat nature with yard birds running after them to vote all the time? You know the only way to get along in this Army is to have just as little to do with captains as you can."

"I know it," said Ed. "But do they know it in Washington?" Whitey said: "Why can't we vote by companies, just set up the polls and vote. Why can't the Army be kind of like a forty-ninth state, don't we rate it?"

A Country's Misbehavior.

"I don't know whether we rate it," said Butch, "but we ain't got it. What we've got is Fourth of July coming up and the country we're fighting for fighting itself. I want to be proud of my country and the reports in the paper this morning made me ashamed. The country is too damn big and too damn beautiful to carry on like this." His eyes were almost tearful. "For I love the place too much to see it go this way."

"Let's go out and get drunk," Ed suggested.

"Can't," said Whitey, "the pubs aren't open. Have to wait till 6 o'clock. I wish I had a little old skyrocket right here, or even a miserable little pinwheel, two for a nickel."

Interpreting The War News

Marshal Albert Kesselring, who is to have a larger command, comprising all the Mediterranean theaters. While Richtofen's successor as commander of the Southeast fleet has not been announced, it is observable that all forces in that area have been put under the command of an air officer, one Von Loehr.

It is possible therefore that the Germans are beginning to take leaves from the Allies' book and are reorganizing the relationship between ground and air forces along lines similar to those worked out by the United Nations in North Africa and recently adopted in the European theater of operations.

"Iceland had geysers but I'll take Yellowstone"

".....And we're headin' there, son, as fast as you can get back in your civvies and load up the car and—"

"But Dad, I was only—"

"Never mind, Sergeant. You've been doing your part; lots more'n I could, but just the same my hair's gotten grayer, and now we can enjoy our peace...touring in the car!"

"I knew we couldn't bank on any new models for a long while after this mess, so I played safe with our car...kept her engine OIL-PLATED like always, with Conoco Nth motor oil, especially to not let the engine get ruined by acid. Your old Mileage Merchant pal told me why there was no worse wartime danger than engine acid."

"Dad, I learned that too, in the service, you bet—"

"Quiet Sergeant, till I show off what I know. That acid comes from ordinary combustion, but when the car was run often and got plenty warm the acid petered out—not causing rank corrosion the way it does with the engine mostly resting. But knowing as I did that chromium-plating won't corrode easy, I could see it would check corrosion to give the engine's insides OIL-PLATING. I found out a synthetic in Conoco Nth oil acts sort of like 'magnetism"—to keep OIL-PLATING fastened to inside engine surfaces—not all draining down to the crankcase even standing still. The car ran sweet bringing you back home, didn't it? Too bad some folks have got to wait months for new models, when they should've used Conoco Nth to OIL-PLATE and save their car. Let's go."

AT PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Newspaper Suspends Publication in Dispute Over Contract.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 7 (AP).—Members of the Providence Typographical Union went on strike today in a contract dispute at the Providence Journal Co. plant, and a picket line was established at the building a union spokesman said.

In accordance with a previous announcement by the company, publication of the Evening Bulletin today will be suspended. Other papers published by the company are the Journal and the Sunday Journal.

The suspension will mark a break of 114 years of continuous publication. The plant was damaged in the 1938 hurricane, but publication was maintained there in Boston and Woonsocket (R. I.) newspaper plants.

Alfred Whittle, international representative of the union, has contended that the company broke its contract with the union by paying over-the-scale wages to certain compositors. The company said it had paid over-the-scale wages to some employees in accord with a policy of 40 years' standing.

Yesterday the War Labor Board, in telegrams to local and international presidents of the union, an independent organization, sought to prevent a walkout. Whittle said that he had seen the telegram but that the position of the union had not changed.

C. M. Barker, president of the international union, said last night in Indianapolis that "all we're trying to do is to get the company to live up to a decision reached by a local board of arbitration."

Baker charged that the publishers "refused to abide by the findings of a local arbitration board headed by the Rev. William C. Meehan, O. P., of Providence College. He said the board had found the company guilty of 'violating details of the contract.'"

Playing Around As Foreign Agent

By Henry McLemore

DUBLIN. My own mother could pass me on the street in Dublin today and not recognize me. The chances are that she would take one look at me as I walked by and say, "Mercy! Who could that strange creature be?" For you see I am in disguise and playing at being a foreign agent in a neutral country.

I decided to have a go at amateur foreign agenting after listening to some of the stories told me in London by correspondents who had been here in Eire where Axis as well as Allied Nations still have consulates. A correspondent told me in a whisper that no matter where he went in Dublin he could feel eyes boring into his back and could see quiet, little men listening to every word he said. Another told me that he always looked under the bed and into the clothes closets before he turned out the light at night. Still another told me that he even stuffed the keyhole of his room and would have liked the assurance of cold steel under his pillow.

WELL, THERE WAS still enough of the spirit of adventure in my Georgia frame to make me come to Dublin. Before I left London I tried to remember all the spy movies I had seen and how sleuths dressed. I thought of Conrad Veidt, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Spencer Tracy and all the others who had gone through hell and high water on celluloid. I finally decided on a very simple outfit. I purchased a long linen duster which hadn't been used since those who drove their cars at 30 miles an hour were known as "scorchers." I also invested in a motoring cap of the same vintage, a pair of heavy goggles and some rubber-soled shoes.

It was in this ensemble that I arrived in Dublin and went straightway to Jammie's Restaurant. It is in the men's bar of Jammie's and in the Buttery of the New Hibernian Hotel that my informants said all the agents gathered.

"It's just like being in Lisbon or Stockholm," they said. "Just keep your mouth shut and listen."

I CREATED quite a stir when I strode into Jabbe's. Every eye was on me as I peered through the goggles and took a seat in a corner which gave me a sweep of the room and protected me from any possible attack from behind. I had a couple of Guinnesses and began to feel like Edward G. Robinson. I strained my ears for conversation, hoping to pick up scraps of information which would be valuable to the American Government. But, everyone talked in code. I heard a man who must have been a German distinctly say something about "fillet of sole with sauce meunier." I dutifully put this down in my notebook. A Frenchman (he must have been a Vichy man) talked long and earnestly about the importance of Dubonnet Sherry. This too went into the notebook and when I got back to London, the Embassy will have my notes straight away.

AFTER TAKING thousands of notes, it seemed to me that I should talk a little and put any enemy agents who might be listening on the wrong scent. So, when a fellow asked me for a match I asked him in a loud voice if he had heard of the new American secret weapons—a street-fighting gun that could be forced around corners, a glider that could fly backwards and a new type of submarine that would not submerge. No one took a note on what I said, so I said it all over again, this time in a louder voice and I added another hush-hush weapon—a bomb that was laden with chicken-pox germs. Still no one took a note so I finally said the hell with it and ordered three more Guinnesses.

IT IS MY OPINION that Dublin isn't at all like Lisbon or Stockholm but is simply a city filled with people, who, because of advanced civilization or ignorance, don't want any part of the war.

In conclusion, if you have enough petrol to enable you to motor a bit and want a smart duster, cap and goggles I can be reached at the Shelbourne Hotel in Dublin, Room 113. If you call in person, you'll find Room 113 on the fifth floor, which is something only an Irish architect would do.

BROADWAY

Notes of an Innocent Bystander

THE SHOW-SHOPS: "The Vagabond King," a musical that prospered in the 20s, was revived the other night. Some of the critics welcomed it again, and others simply glared at it. The consensus, however, embraced the defendant... Variety revealed this irony: During the riots in Detroit "Abie's Irish Rose," which pleads for race tolerance, did a spectacular business there... The 19-day heat wave dented the profits of all the shows, except "Oklahoma"... Broadway stages have always argued the point: That weather, stock market crashes and earthquakes cannot hurt a good show... Had Oliver, the press agent for Ringling's Circus, was wounded over an item here that both circuses were having trouble peddling their upper seats... Almost had us in tears with his letter—until we read Variety's Page 55, which headlines its Ringling place: "Good Show But Six Disappointments"... M. Todd, seeking a replacement for the holidaying Gypsy Rose Lee (in the lead of "Star and Garter"), offered the juicy role to obscure show girls around Broadway... Two we know—rejected it... Stage fright!

THE MAGIC LANTERNS: "Best Foot Forward," which was a merry musical on the stage, still tinkles prettily on celluloid... "Background to Danger" revives the old bang-bang of the gangster flickers, and who's complaining? Hooch runners are now Nazis, and you've got Geo. Raft, Sidney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre to speak sharply to them... "Two Tickets to London" is a tale of intrigue and getaway in France, none too clever, with Michele Morgan and Alan Curtis with the stiffest upper lips. Dooley Wilson, the pianist of "Casablanca," is doubling on the accordion... "Chatterbox" is a show case for the comicallities of Judy Canova and Joe E. Brown, which are as light as thistledown—a ton of it.

THE NETWORKS: Talk about rubbing it in—the authors of "Manhattan at Midnight" deliberately wrote a bore into the script... Jack Carson is an attractive comic, playing just a nice guy and not a Crossley dog. His material is no kin to Oscar Wilde, but Carson's easy-does-it style saves it... The best of the service songs was aired on "March of Time" Thursday night. It is Howard Dietz and Vernon Duke's piece, "The Silver Shield," and has been adopted by one and all of the Coast Guard as their official song... Senators Wheeler and Nye's contribution to the Mutual Forum made you sorry radio had ever been invented. Their anemic opinions were completely drained of common-sense... Information Please, which digs deep in the intellectual mine for queries and answers, gets its biggest laughs and zip with ordinary puns.

THE MAGAZINES: This reader can't locate much purpose in Maj. Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson's "Who Will Help Us Fight Japan?" (in World at War) other than a desire to insult our Allies... It's the old reverse routine—"Russia and England are adorable people but—". Crudely done, too... Walter Davenport Gallup'd the South for Collier's. A resume of what's eating Dixie... Time reports that Baruch's appointment was greeted jubilantly in Wash... One trustee Bernard remembers to keep his guard up and remember that Elmer Davis received a barrage of hugs when he entered gov't work, too... Time brushes off Bricker with this thumbnail: "A genial handsaker, gifted in the art of avoiding issues and uncanny in the knack of making friends without influencing people"...

QUOTATION-MARKS-MANSHIP: Matt Weinstock: The public refused to be eyebrowed by John L. Lewis... Samuel Hoffman: Oh, for those good old square meals that used to produce round figures... Gov. of Idaho Bottolfsen: On the battlefields of Tunisia and Guadalcanal, where bullets whined but men did not... The pride of dying rich raises the loudest laugh in Hell... Modern Screen: The heart has no calendar... B. Michelet: Here's to woman, the Sunday of man... Elsie Janis: A slap on the back or a sock on the chin are really the same if your balance is good.

THE WASHINGTON SITUATION: Ickes hates Sumner. Sumner hates Bill... Hull yips at Wallace, who pops at The Hill... Mac's cooled on Casey... Land banks at Knox... Niles runs to Hopkins, who phones Oscar Cox... Murphy and Jackson—Oh, man! Wotta case!... The name "Frank" to Hugo will trap you off base... Mention Frank Walker and Nee's cheeks turn pale... If palsy with Wickard—steer clear of McHale.

And so they toll by midnight oil and dawning's early light. Each day to make another foe—each night another fight... Their war for freedom knows no rest—their wills admit no can'ts... But never count the time it takes to kick each other's pants... They battle on from dawn to dark, with ferret eyes reports they scan... To put Der Fuehrer in the fire?... To put each other on the pan!

Wedding Invitations

By Emily Post

BECAUSE of the lack of copper for engraving plates, a bride-to-be has just sent me a sample wedding invitation which she has written by hand in very fine script, on a gilt-edged card. She explains that because of the shortage of paper each invitation is to be sent out in a single envelope. Apparently she believes an ordinary note, written in ordinary handwriting, is not good enough.

So let me say quickly that an ordinary note hand-written in the second person is the most flattering invitation possible to receive. Because it means a small wedding to which only those whom the bride and bridegroom most care for, are to be included. On the other hand, if you would like to hand-print the script there is no objection—even though fine machine printing would in my opinion be better. The shortage of paper and labor, too, are adequate reasons for omitting the inside envelope. I should advise against the gilt-edged card, which is associated with golden wedding anniversaries and not weddings.

From the standpoint of fashionable acceptance, nothing quite equals the beauty of a double sheet of finest vellum paper (suggesting the petal of a gardenia in texture) beautifully engraved and inclosed in an inner and an outer envelope. But while rationing continues no one can object to the paper-saving omission of the inner envelope.

DEAR MRS. POST: My daughter has just been married to a man in the service whom I have never met. We live a great distance from the camp where they both are now. She met him while she was working in another city, and wanted to bring him home to meet us before he went to camp, but he received sudden orders and they were married right off and she went with him. Knowing these facts, do you think that I should write him a note; and if so, what shall I say?

Answer: Certainly write. Tell him how disappointed you were not to have been able to be present at their marriage, and not to have been able to welcome him into the family, and that you of course hope that he will come safely back and that he and your daughter will have a long and happy future together.

Our Army Put Typhus Fever On the Spot

By

Logan Clendening, M. D.

MANY students of the history of disease were apprehensive when United States troops were sent to the African theater of war with a possibility of the invasion of the Balkans because the situation raised the spectre of one of the most vicious diseases that has ever afflicted mankind.

Most of my readers, I presume, have never heard of it. I confess that I have never seen a case and I doubt whether one out of one hundred of my professional friends have. It is typhus fever—not to be confused with typhoid fever—sometimes called spotted fever, jail fever, ship fever and army fever.

Its characteristics are that it appears when large groups of people are herded together and sanitary facilities break down. Or as in the case of our African army, when large numbers of men in close contact with a population which has low ideals or no ideals about sanitary care of the body.

WE HAVE discovered that it is carried from person to person by the body louse. The louse infests the clothing of a person who either has typhus or is a carrier of the germ, sucks some of his blood including the germ, and then moves on to an uninfected person and when it again begins to feed on the uninfected person, instills the germ into his blood.

While the disease has not appeared in this country, except in sporadic cases, for over a century, it is by no means a theoretical menace. After the last war the condition of the Balkans from the universal epidemic of typhus fever made them practically a dead country.

A United States Army commission under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Edgar Erskine Hume, of the Medical Corps of the Army, was sent to Serbia after the Armistice in 1918. At that time the only method of dealing with the epidemic was to delouse the person and clothing of every individual. The "Serbian horror" in which the clothing were sterilized became a familiar sight in cities and along the roadways of the countries.

THE EPIDEMIC was finally conquered in this way, but not until it had exacted an enormous mortality toll. Col. Hume has recently told of this and other aspects of the work of the Medical Corps of the Army in a book called Victories of Army Medicine (published by J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia, 1943).

But the use of a vaccine which was more or less problematical in its effectiveness was universally instituted and it is a great relief to be able to say by now that this vaccine appears to have been completely successful. The American military forces in North Africa have come through almost untouched by typhus fever, although the disease was rampant in the region which they invaded in 1942.

Questions and Answers.

Worried Mother: My little girl, two years old, has just swallowed a real small safety pin. Do you think it will pass from her, or how long should I wait for an X-ray?

Answer: The chances are it will pass from her, but if it were my little girl I would hustle her to an X-ray pronto.

W. R.: Would an X-ray show definite sign of cancer, even in its early stage?

Answer: The X-ray is never definite in the diagnosis of cancer, except bone cancer.

W. C. F.: What is the meaning of the diagnosis, in a man 47 years of age, of paroxysmal tachycardia and hyperacidity and just how serious is it?

Answer: Paroxysmal tachycardia is a peculiar condition, probably nervous in origin, where there are spells when the heart suddenly begins to beat very fast. The heart rate returns to normal just as suddenly. It is not a sign of organic disease of the heart. Hyperacidity is a form of acid dyspepsia, also probably due to nerves and also not serious.

Summer Headgear

By Sylvia Stiles

THE millinery designers have been up against some tough situations from time to time but it is doubtful whether they've had any equal to their present summer assignment—that of providing hats sufficiently appealing to keep American women from following the hatless fad. A flower or a bow goes anywhere these days as a substitute for a hat so it takes a most beguiling headpiece to get any attention.

Summer hats as presented by outstanding designers and displayed in St. Louis indicate that the ultra-feminine appeal is the one which is being counted upon to make a chapeau an indispensable part of a summer costume. Not only are the flowers and the veils of the springtime continuing into the current season as a means of supplying flattering accents, but some quaint hat trimmings of the early part of the century are being revived.

HORSEHAIR BRAID hasn't been used much in recent years except for picturesque hats for bridal parties but it has a place in the 1943 summer mode. The milliners are using it to provide transparent and eye-shading edges to wide-brimmed hats of straw and felt, and also have found that this cool-looking material can be handled in some tricky ways. The brimmed hat illustrated gives an example of a novel use for horsehair. Layer after layer of the braid in varied shades of rose make a ruffled brim that is festive. Even though the hat is of the sailor type this soft, becoming brim gives it a glamorous aspect.

A double-ruffled brim of hair braid is responsible for a stunning effect that is proving popular. The brim is wide and the hat looks most effective when entirely black. Equally as interesting but directly contrasting in size is the hair braid calot which has butterfly bows of the gauzy straw perched on the top to look like real butterflies. Again, this model is most effective of black rather than colors and is designed to be worn forward on the brow or back of a pompadour.

Another old-fashioned favorite which has been revived this season is lace. Those lacy-looking white straw berets and turbans appearing in the springtime were forerunners of cotton lace models for summer. Both wide-brimmed and brimless shapes are seen. Starched cotton lace fashions a wide brim on a striking sailor designed for wear with town cottons. Dyed cotton lace is used both for brim and crown of another interesting hat which is of cartwheel proportions.

DECIDEDLY QUAIN is the muffin hat of white Brittany lace which is featured with a ruffled gilet to match. The hat band and bow, arranged on top of the hat, are of black velvet ribbon. It has been a long time since velvet ribbon was used for summer millinery, so again the designers are utilizing the charm of old-fashioned favorites in their efforts to attract women to the flattering qualities of a softly, decorative mode.

The vogue of straw hats made of milan, leghorn and panama provides further evidence of the return to feminine accents in a year that is so largely taken with tailored or casual themes.

My Day -O- By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK, Tuesday.

TOMORROW, July the 7th, is the day which marks China's sixth anniversary of resistance to Japanese aggression. The Citizens' Committee has written to me of their desire to honor China on this day, and of their belief that the greatest honor we could pay the Chinese people is to repeal the exclusion act and place immigration on the same quota basis that we have for any other nation.

I imagine that the country as a whole has given very little thought to this question, but there is no doubt that the Japanese have been using it as a great propaganda weapon. They hope to undermine Chinese morale by telling them that we never intend to deal with them on an equal basis. They report that China, in the future, has a better chance in a solid Asiatic bloc than in trying to make the world a peaceful work in which all nations can deal with each other's citizens as individuals and as having equal rights wherever they go.

We have no real policy as far as I know on this question. This law was passed primarily with sectional backing and because of special interests, but the people as a whole have never, as far as I know, thought this question through as a question of future world policy and made their wishes clear to their government.

Perhaps the time has come when the people of this nation have got to think of questions such as this for the very reason that we are counting today on our Chinese allies to give their life blood in the struggle against Japan. If they should decide to give up the struggle, it would not be of sectional interest to us, or a purely academic question. It would mean that boys from all over this country would face in the Southwest Pacific, a far longer war, a far more dangerous war. Even when the war was won, the whole nation would still be faced with an Asia arrayed against the rest of the world. It would mean that we must be prepared to meet that idea with a smaller population, necessitating better equipment, and equipment costs money.

I do not know and have no way of finding out what the people in this country as a whole really want to do, but I do think it is a question that they must think about and think about seriously. China has fought for seven years. Madame Chiang Kai-shek made it plain how she views the future and perhaps she and her people await our answer. It is an answer which no government official can give—the people themselves must speak.

Thin Bran Bread

Three-fourths cup butter, three-fourths cup sugar, three eggs, three cups bran, one and one-half cups milk, one cup flour, one-half cup yellow corn meal, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup seedless raisins (optional).

Cream butter and sugar together and whip until light and fluffy. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add bran; let stand while you sift the flour, corn meal, baking powder and salt. Then add the sifted dry ingredients to first mixture alternately with milk. If raisins are used in the recipe prepare them by covering with boiling water and let them simmer for 10 minutes; drain and add them to the recipe along with the bran. Spread mixture in large shallow greased pan to one-third inch thickness. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 20 minutes.

Economical Menus for Tomorrow

IF you need an excuse for cooking veal chops in sour cream, you'll find it in the fact that because sour cream is acid it has a slight tenderizing effect on meat. As a matter of fact, anyone who likes sour cream won't wait for an excuse, knowing that a lift its slightly acid tang gives to almost any meat. If you are not familiar with the many uses of this luxury in cooking and serving, you have a pleasant experience still ahead of you. Try serving it instead of the whipped cream which is no more, on fresh fruit shortcakes, cobbblers and pies; on sugared berries, peaches and other fresh fruits; as a garnish for tomato or beet soup; or even, as a special luxury, eat it as a dessert in itself, with honey or fruit preserves. Sour cream isn't really as fattily rich as it feels on the tongue; it's souring makes it rich and thick and luscious, but adds no calories; so don't be afraid to indulge in it now and then.

Veal Chops in Sour Cream. Four thick veal chops, two tablespoons flour, two tablespoons shortening, paprika, salt and pepper, one cup sour cream.

Dredge veal chops in flour and brown on both sides in hot lard. When nicely browned, season with salt and pepper and paprika. Add sour cream, cover tightly and cook very slowly until done, about 45 minutes. Remove to a hot platter and make sour cream gravy by thickening drippings and adding more liquid. 4 servings.

MENUS FOR THURSDAY.

Breakfast—Orange juice, six juice oranges; prepared cereal, two and one-half cups cereal, top milk, sugar; toast and butter, eight slices enriched bread, butter or fortified margarine; jelly, one-third cup jelly; coffee (for adults), three tablespoons coffee; milk (for children), two cups milk.

Luncheon—Dehydrated vegetable soup, one four-ounce package dehydrated vegetable soup; crackers, one-half pound soda crackers; fruit salad, one-third head lettuce, four apricots cut in half, 12 pitted stewed prunes, one-fourth pound pitted cherries, French dressing; milk for all, six cups milk.

Dinner—Veal chops in sour cream. (see recipe), seven red points; parsley potatoes, one and one-half pounds potatoes, butter and minced parsley; buttered carrots, two bunches carrots, two tablespoons butter or fortified margarine, seasoning; celery curls, inner branches of celery stalk; hard rolls and butter, eight hard rolls, butter or fortified margarine; sliced bananas, four bananas, sliced, sugar and cream if desired, or a cold custard sauce; cereal beverage (for adults) two teaspoons cereal beverage; milk (for children), two cups milk.

Points for day: No blue, seven red points for meat, two or three red points for fats.
FREE—Meta Given leaflet, "Sweets for Victory." This leaflet contains a number of tested sugar-saving recipes. For your copy, write to Meta Given, in care of the Post-Dispatch, enclosing a large, self-addressed 3-cent stamped envelope. Fill the mixture is obtained. Fill the prunes with the mixture and serve on a bed of shredded lettuce which has been lightly dressed with mayonnaise. Serve four to six prunes to a portion, depending on the size.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO HOME CANNERS

The Glass Top Seal Fruit Jar Cap for Home Canning was developed as a Wartime product to conserve metal. It consists of a Metal Band, Glass Lid and Rubber Ring.

Because of the difference in the nature of these three materials this Cap must be used differently from any other fruit jar cap. If used properly it will give excellent results. If not used properly, results will be bad, including failure to seal and breakage of jars. Following are simple instructions for use of the Glass Top Seal Cap and must be followed carefully.

1. Do NOT use in Oven Canning.
2. If processing, (cooking in jar), leave 1 inch space in top of jar. If using open kettle, leave 1/4 inch space in top of jar.
3. Fit rubber around projection on bottom side of lid.
4. Place lid so rubber lies between lid and top edge of jar.
5. Turn bands tight, then loosen slightly (about 1/4 turn). Bands must fit loosely during processing (cooking). This is important and must be done to insure best results. If using Open Kettle, screw bands tight as soon as jar is filled.
6. After processing, screw bands tight to complete seal. Remove bands 12 hours after canning.

would let me know in some way that she understands the reason why I wrote.

ANXIOUS

Frankly, I don't care whether you immediately restore friendly relations with this juvenile Juliet or not. What interests me is whether you have learned one of Life's Large Lessons: Anytime you want to make a jackass of yourself, liquor will do it for you. Just what drove you to the bottle at salubrious 16 I can't imagine. But if this is the silly tangent you have taken—experimentally, socially, or because you think it's smart—what right have you to expect smiles and favor from a really nice girl?

Apologize to her, as any lad should when he has done a foolish thing. And let the bout with J. Barleycorn teach you what those even wiser have had to learn—a child doesn't become a man by imitation, or by the theft of illegal privileges, but by growing up with dignity, self-respect, and a sure vision of the sort of worthwhile person he wants to be.

Case Records

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

CASE Z-160: Nathan K., aged 27, is a typical neurotic. I have consulted seven specialists in the last three years," he informed me. "They haven't found anything seriously wrong with my heart or lungs or any other organs."

"They agree that I am neurotic, and have given me sedatives. I spent three months at a sanitarium recently, but I am still unable to work. My heart pounds and I feel as if I am going to die. Dr. Crane, I am alone in the world, for my parents passed away before I was out of college. I am in such a muddled state of mind that I would end my life if I weren't such a coward."

DIAGNOSIS: Men and women by the thousands write to me every month with such complaints as Nathan cites. One of their chief problems is ignorance regarding sexual matters, so they are victims of guilt complexes.

But even when they learn the facts about sex, they may still be neurotic or fearful of their health.

The best medicine as regards physical health and vitality is belief in God and an active part in church work.

We start out in childhood with a dominant male parent to fend for us. He protects us, giving us a feeling of peace and security.

God is simply an extension of this earthly father on whom we have learned to rely for comfort and assurance.

BUT WHEN our earthly father dies and we begin to feel the desire to lean upon some older, stronger individual, we become panicky. Women show this effect even more quickly than men, but there are millions of both sexes in this country who are chronic worriers about their health.

If they'd only rely on God and extort their attention by active participation in God's church organizations, they would soon become dynamic, healthy individuals. Instead, they are neurotic, semi-invalids, cowardly and hypochondriacs.

They spend literally millions of dollars every year for medicines and medical treatment which they will never need if they'd only lean on God.

A UNIVERSITY was once defined as Mark Hopkins on one end of a log and the student on the other. Perhaps we might fittingly paraphrase that by saying a happy, healthy personality is largely based on God at one end of the log and the individual on the other, co-operating.

Speaking not as a clergyman but only as a physician and psychologist let me advise you to save your money by teaming up with God. Then you will not need to consult physicians as much. You can thus pay your church pledge with the medical fees God eliminates.

You'll be healthier, happier and far less selfish, meanwhile, for when you focus on God and His current projects that need your help, you will become self-less. Then you will be courageous well-adjusted adults instead of neurotic cry babies.

The Legend Lady of the Ozarks

She Has Spent 30 Years Collecting the Sayings of the Hill People.

By F. A. Behymer

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

ROLLA, Mo., July 6.

MRS. MABEL MUELLER was walking down the street one day, minding her own business, but she was known for what she was, a collector of folk sayings, and her approach caused misgivings. Two oldtimers, in town for the day, were sitting on the curb. "Here she comes," said one to the other: "better mind what you say. She's the legend woman, and, by golly, she puts down everything she hears." The other eyed her warily and they both "kept their traps shut" until she had passed, for they didn't care to have what they said put down.

Some of the back-hill folks are like that. They don't like to have a prying person putting down what they say and how they say it. It is not so much that they are distrustful as that they do not want to appear outlandish in their speech, as sometimes happens when what they say gets into print. Sometimes, though, they are downright suspicious. Once Mrs. Mueller got herself into a mort of trouble. She was collecting witch lore back in the Ozarks, and the idea got around that she was a witch herself or she wouldn't be asking so many questions about witches. Anyhow, she was too durned curious for any good to come of it. She still shudders when she thinks of what they might have done to her, for the old folks haven't forgotten how to deal with witches, like they used to when the accusation was not uncommon and the methods of dealing with them were drastic.

For 30 years Mrs. Mueller has been gathering folk lore in the hills. It was hard sledding at first. It was not enough that she was a "furriner" who had settled among them. She had to go and make it worse by sayin' plain out that she didn't believe in witches. Mostly they were polite—too polite. There was a deadly coldness about that made her shiver. The only one half way friendly was "Granny," who sat by her box wood-stove and smoked her pipe of clay, disdaining the coals that her men-folks smoked because a cob wasn't ladylike. She tolerated Mrs. Mueller's questions and answered most of them, and as time went on she told the tales that Mrs. Mueller wanted to hear.

One of the things that Granny told her was that a witch, in order to hex anybody, had to borrow something from that person, preferably a personal trinket. "With that in her possession she could cast spells, cause livestock to sicken and die and afflict humans. Mrs. Mueller, newly settled in the hills, sometimes had need of borrowing. Granny, for she didn't really believe in witches herself—or, anyway, not much—was willing to lend but she warned the newcomer to ask fewer questions and do less borrowing among the neighbors if she didn't want to get into trouble.

"Granny's son, Eb, had bought a new wood-saw. He didn't know how to run the thing and before long it stopped. Well, it happened that the morning it stopped Mrs. Mueller ran over to Granny's to 'borrer a dustin' of meal' for cornbread. Eb saw her pass with her bowl of cornmeal and figured that the borrowing woman was somehow to blame for his wood-saw that wouldn't run. He glared at her but said nothing.

Another day the furriner borrowed a pinch of sugar. Granny was willing to let her have the sugar, but she was troubled over how Eb would take it. "Mabel, child," she said, "Eb's been accusin' you of witchin' his wood-saw. I don't believe it but I'm goin' to put it to the test. I'm goin' to lend you a pinch of sugar. If you're a witch Eb's wood-saw'll git worse. If you ain't a witch it'll run again. I hope it'll run again. I'm goin' to pray over it."

Mrs. Mueller knew that the only thing the wood-saw needed to un-witch it if it had been witched was a mechanic who knew the innards of the thing. Instead of the neighborhood boys who had been tinkering with it. She told Granny so, and Granny said maybe that was all that was needed. As Mrs. Mueller went away with her pinch of sugar Eb shook his fist at her. He was so wrought up that Mrs. Mueller knew he would try a charm on her. Probably he would fill a bottle with needles, cork it tightly and place it in running water. That was a charm which never failed to foil a witch, cause her great pain and put an end of her devilry.

Whether Eb went as far as that Mrs. Mueller never knew, probably not, for Granny persuaded him to have a mechanic come out from town and have a look at the contraption. He twisted a gadget and it started up and Eb never had any more trouble with it. If the mechanic had failed, there's no telling what might have happened. As it was, Eb made up his mind that, although the borrowing looked bad, maybe the furriner woman didn't hex his wood-saw after all. Granny was sure that her prayin' over it had something to do with the outcome. There came a time when Mrs.

Mueller could borrow short sweet-nin', a dustin' o' meal, taters or a hoe. What was more important, she could claim the hill people's confidence and listen to their lore, for she had become one of them. No longer a furriner, she became what she proudly calls herself, a hillbilly of the hillbills. It took a good long while but when a woman from the outside helps fetch their babies, nurses their sick and lays out their dead, shares their sorrows and adds to their joys, she finally gets on the inside and nothing that they have is too good for her, not even the folk lore that they guard from the scorners.

She has lived with them and, in all humility, learned from them, and she glows as she sings their praises. "They taught me tolerance and understanding of all human joys and ills," she says. "They are a happy people, a contented people. It would be wrong to discourage their habits and their way of life. Their temptations and longings are few. Their home life is an example of American freedom. They are not ignorant in the true sense of the word. They probably think deeper and try to dig down into the great unknown of human power. They may have crude ideas, but they are diamonds in the rough. They are wholesome and unashamed of the truth according to their teachings. You may not believe in their witchcraft but you share it when a black cat crosses your path, or a mirror is broken, or you walk under a ladder, and you ward off evil, as they do, by crossing your fingers."

Because she is a real hillbilly at heart, Mrs. Mueller confesses that she sorta believes in their witches. She loves these people and all their quaint traditions and sayings, loves them for taking her into their hearts and sharing with her the secrets that they guard from all who do not come into their inner circle.

BELIEF in witches, and fear of them, is not general even in the "hollers" that are most remote, but superstitions survive, modified little by modern influence. The old-timers' faith in weather signs is not shaken, though they often fail. It has been strengthened, indeed, by the way the signs came true in the spring. If it rains on Monday it will rain all week. And it did. If it rains on the first Sunday of the month there will be showers on the three following Sundays. Sure enough. "Rain on Easter means rain on seven following Sundays." And the Weather Bureau man had to admit this time that there was rain on seven Sundays, with the eighth thrown in for good measure.

If the sun sets clear on Tuesday it will rain before Friday. And it generally does—somewhere. If the rooster crows at midnight there will be rain before morning. If the chickens go early to roost expect a storm. If they stand with tails to windward, there will be rain within a few hours. Which suggests that the chickens must have done a lot of standing with their tails to the wind in the past two or three months. If quail sun themselves in coveys, two or three days of good weather will follow. It would seem that the quail did not do much sunning in coveys of late. If the chickens stand on the woodpile and pick their feathers, rain is on the way.

If the cat lies in a coil, with head and stomach up, bad weather is coming, but if it yawns and stretches the weather will be good. People who do not bother to have a cat have only themselves to blame if they are caught un-awares.

At a time like this, when chickens are worth money, it is well to remember that eggs set on Sunday will bring long-legged roosters, but if you want pullets you must carry the settin' of eggs in a women's bonnet.

North-South were not using any slam convention and when South responded to the two-spade cue bid with two no trump, North sensed that the only sure way of reaching a slam was to bid it in one fell swoop. He recognized that South might have only a four-card diamond suit, but he was more willing to run that risk than to bid four hearts or four clubs and probably be left in by South, who, obviously, had a "ninny." He knew that South was a master in the play of the cards, and hoped that if the slam contract proved difficult, South would nevertheless bring it home.

SOUTH more than justified his partner's confidence. The opening lead was the heart ten. This was won by the jack, and immediately the club finesse was tried out. When the queen held, declarer cashed the diamond king and led a second trump to the ace. The fall of West's 10 on this trick gave declarer pause. Were the trumps breaking three-three, or did East have the remaining J-8? Declarer, after close analysis, decided that it would be too dangerous to lead a third round of trumps at this time. Instead, he tested out the general distribution by leading a second heart to dummy. When West could neither follow suit nor ruff, the situation became reasonably clear.

ALL THE hearts were cashed, as was the club ace, and then a low club was led from dummy. East, reduced to his original three sp

Film From Best-Seller On Orpheum Program

A SCREEN version of the best-selling novel, "Assignment in Brittany," introducing a new French star, Pierre Aumont, to American audiences, comes to the Orpheum Theater tomorrow. It will have "Redhead From Manhattan" as a companion feature.

Booked for the Ambassador and Fox and to be previewed at these theaters tonight is "Stormy Weather," musical comedy with a cast of Negro entertainers. On the same program tomorrow will be "Background to Danger," a spy melodrama.

New features for the Missouri tomorrow will be "The Leopard Man" and "Captive Wild Woman," with "The Leopard Man" to be previewed tonight. "Stage Door Canteen" is being kept at Loew's State Theater for a second week and "China" and "Saludos Amigos," previously shown in first-run theaters, go into the St. Louis Theater tonight.

"ASSIGNMENT IN BRITANY," written originally by Helen MacInnes, tells the story of a French patriot, played by Aumont, who is dropped from a plane over Nazi-held Brittany and pretends to be a young Frenchman whom he greatly resembles. What he does not know is that the man he is impersonating was a Nazi sympathizer. The sympathizer's mother, played by Margaret Wyckley, sees through the deception but is quite satisfied. Plot developments reach a climax in a Commando raid on a German submarine base. In the cast are Susan Peters, Richard Whorf and Signe Hasso. "REDHEAD FROM MANHATTAN," the other Orpheum feature, stars Lupe Velez in a dual role as twin sisters. One young woman is star of a Broadway musical comedy, the other a romantically inclined beauty who complicates her own affairs by taking over her sister's theatrical job temporarily.

"STORMY WEATHER," new Ambassador-Fox feature, describes the progress of swing music through the two decades, with settings in Memphis, Chicago, New York and Hollywood. Among the entertainers in the film are Lena Horne, Bill Robinson, Cab Calloway and his band, Katherine Dunham and her dancers, Fats Waller, the Nicholas Brothers, Ada Brown and Dooley Wilson. Song numbers, some old, some new, are "Stormy Weather," "Ain't Misbehavin'," "I'm Nobody's Baby," "My, My, Ain't That Somethin'," "There's No Two Ways About Love," and "Walkin' the Dog."

"BACKGROUND TO DANGER," on the same program, is set in Turkey, with George Raft as an American secret service man, Sydney Greenstreet as one of Hitler's henchmen, Peter Lorre and Brenda Marshall working for Russia. Possession of a packet of forged documents is the principal object of all the spy work.

"THE LEOPARD MAN," new Missouri feature, is a thriller directed by Jacques Tourneur, who also directed "Cat People" and "I Walked With a Zombie." The setting is a town in New Mexico and a series of crimes is ascribed to a pet leopard.

"CAPTIVE WILD WOMAN" features John Carradine as a crazy scientist who transforms an orangutan into a lovely young woman. The young film actress named Acquafetta plays the transformed creature.

This summer, get
Scrubbing toilets is old-fashioned.
When hot days call for extra sanitary precautions, use San-Flush more often. It's easy, quick and sure.
Removes film and stubborn stains without scrubbing. Each application cleans away many recurring toilet germs and a cause of toilet odors.
Use it at least twice a week.
Don't confuse San-Flush with ordinary cleansers. It works chemically. Cleans the hidden trap. San-Flush is absolutely safe in septic tanks and toilet connections when used according to directions on can.
